Stock market prices plunge as gold soars

Times News Services

Stock prices at the New York and Toronto exchanges dropped sharply in record trading today as the price of gold took another giant leap and the U.S. dollar dropped on European markets.

The New York market crumbled in the heaviest trading day in history as the impact of government inflation fighting reverberated throughout the investment community.

Panicky sellers swamped the stock market, driving volume past the 66,370,000-share all-time record with 90 minutes of trading still to go.

Trading was tumultuous as investors considered the impact of Federal Reserve Board moves which have sparked a surge in interest rates and worry about the possibility of a deep recession.

The closely watched Dow, down 17 points in the first 90 minutes, was off 24.83 points around 2 p.m. It's 26.45-point plunge Tuesday, the worst setback since a 26.99-point skid Jan. 9, 1974, put the Dow 40.02 points in the minus column for the first two days of the week.

The first two-hour volume of 37,530,000 shares eclipsed the previous record of 34,060,000 set Aug. 3, 1978. The first-hour volume of 20,730,000 shares also was a record.

The Big Board's full-day record was 66.3 million shares on Aug. 3, 1978.

The market's slide Monday and Tuesday was the worst since early January 1974 when OPEC raised oil prices in the wake of an Arab oil embargo.

The two-day setback this year and in 1974 was not as bad as the 68.90-point drop on Oct. 28 and Oct. 29, 1929. But the breadth of the market's decline so far this week stunned professional observers.

By 2 p.m. New York time today, 1,700 issues declined and only 57 advanced among the issues crossing the exchange tape. The exchange's high speed transaction ticker was running a record one hour late.

B.C. gasfield looks a winner

Wainoco Oil and Gas Ltd. says it has drilled into a natural gas reservoir that contains an estimated 35 billion cubic feet of gas.

However, it's possible the discovery could yield as much as 300 billion cubic feet in total reserves, said Don Rawlyk, manager of B.C. Petroleum Corp.

Mortgage rate at record high

Times News Services

Stiff increases in mortgage rates were announced today by two major Canadian lending institutions and other firms were expected to follow suit.

The move, following the increase Tuesday in bank interest rates to their highest-ever levels, was expected.

The Royal Bank of Canada set across-the-board increases in its residential rates, effective immediately.

All rates go up by one full percentage point except for that on one-year open conventional mortgages which goes up to 14 per cent from $13\frac{1}{4}$ percent.

For three-to-five year mortgage rates, the closed conventional rate goes to $13\frac{3}{4}$ per cent, with the NHA rate going to $13\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. The open conventional rate rises to $14\frac{1}{4}$ per cent with the NHA rising to 14 per cent.

Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce announced an across-the-board increase of $\frac{3}{4}$ per cent, effective immediately.

For conventional three- and five-year open mortgages, the Canadian Imperial rate now will be $13\frac{3}{4}$ per cent. The conventional three-year open rate and the one-year automatic renewal rate goes to 14 per cent.

Rates for National Housing Act mortgages go to $13\frac{1}{4}$ for the three- and five-year close and to $13\frac{3}{4}$ per cent for three-year open.

Minnie Mt. project cleared

The Court of Appeal in Vancouver today overturned a B.C. Supreme Court decision that had blocked a land-use bylaw for a 70-acre housing development on Minnie Mountain at Ten Mile Point.

Mayor Mel Couvelier of Saanich said the judgment, handed down in a 32-page document, vindicates the municipality.

"I'm relieved the bylaw was found to be valid. It's going to go a long way to clear the air."

The developers, Broadmead Farms Ltd., can proceed with plans for the mixed single-family, townhouse and condominium development as soon as it takes out a building permit, Couvelier said.

Ald. David Paterson said the judgment mean he will reconsider his decision not to run for re-election in November.

"I am absolutely ecstatic," Paterson said. "If the appeal court judge saw no conflict of interest, that could change my decision not to run again."

Paterson said the ruling removed one obstacle, but there are other factors to consider in making a decision whether to seek re-election.

He said the court case has cost him financially and mentally.

Cadboro Bay Residents Association won a supreme court appeal against the controversial land-use bylaw last December when Mr. Justice William Trainor ruled there was a conflict of interest on the part of Paterson.

Paterson, who voted in favor of the bylaw, is office manager for Pearlman and Lindholm, the legal firm that handles some of the municipality's business.

Larry Fast, lawyer for the residents association, said he didn't want to comment until the reasons for the decision are known.

He did say an appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada is possible if the decision is determined to be a weak one.

Pickets shut ferries HQ

Pickets also hit ferry service to Powell River and the Vancouver ferry information office.

Mediator Fred Geddes has invited both sides back to the bargaining table but as of noon, no talks were scheduled and the union said it would continue its rotating strikes.

Thursday, a picket line will halt service on the Horseshoe Bay-Nanaimo run and a study session will prevent the Queen of Prince Rupert from operating on the Swartz Bay-Tsawwassen route.

On Friday, service between Swartz Bay and Tsawwassen will be halted by a picket line and the maintenance yard at Tsawwassen will also be struck.

Meanwhile, Lloyd Thornhill, the man who called for a full-scale unauthorized strike, has been removed from the union negotiating team in a showdown with president Shirley Mathieson.

Thornhill said a majority of the 2,700-member B.C. Ferry and Marine Workers Union want to escalate picketing activity beyond the executive-endorsed rotating strike strategy.

The union executive rejected the proposal because of the chance negotiations might resume through the mediator.

Thornhill later said Mathieson told him there was a unanimous vote to relieve him of his duties on the 11-member team.

The decision to stay with rotating strikes is a move apparently designed to avoid the confrontation that might result if workers went on a full strike and the government invoked essential services legislation as it did two years ago.

"It's hovering over your head all the time," said one ferry worker. "You can never forget that it's there."

Hydro firm in land swap

LANGLEY (CP)—A subsidiary of British Columbia Hydro, which supported the removal of 626 acres in this Fraser Valley community from the agricultural land reserve, will get about 80 acres of land.

Dave Robertson, spokesman for the Crown utility, confirmed Tuesday that the subsidiary, Columbia Estate Company Ltd., will get 80 acres in exchange for a nearby similar-sized parcel of land it owns.

The parcel, bought by Columbia in 1974, is still in the agricultural reserve and will not be as valuable as land that can be used for industrial purposes.

Robertson said Columbia is a wholly-owned subsidiary of Hydro. Its president is Hydro chairman Robert Bonner and its directors are Hydro officials.

He said the original 80 acres was acquired in a "favorable deal" with Gloucester Properties Ltd., the company which persuaded the provincial cabinet's Environment and Land Committee to release the 626 acres from the reserve after its application to free the land for industrial use was turned down by the B.C. Land Commission.

Robinson said Hydro supported Gloucester's application to the cabinet committee, but he denied allegations that Hydro support was contingent on the 80-acre swap.

"Our support was not contingent on the transfer," he said. "We had always supported it (industrial use for the land) because we felt it was a good idea to have that land developed for industrial purposes."

Baby mauled, puppy to live

TORONTO (CP) — A puppy that severely mauled a two-week-old baby has no concept of viciousness and will not be destroyed, says the Ontario Humane Society's executive director.

Tom Hughes said Tuesday that a full inquiry must be held into the "terrible tragedy;" in which the infant lost both her ears and faces amputation of a finger.

But he said: "This is one dog I am not going to see killed.

"I can't believe that a six-week-old puppy has any concept of what it is doing. It can't be vicious in any concept of the term."

Peel Regional Police said the mongrel puppy attacked Amy Anicic early Saturday when she rolled off a couch in her family's home in Mississauga, just west of Toronto.

Theresa Anicic, 22, who had just brought Amy home from a maternity ward, had dozed off after feeding the baby.

In addition to her other injuries, Amy suffered cuts to the face, arms and scalp. Doctors at Toronto's Hospital for Sick Children, where the baby was in serious but stable condition today, managed to save one of the child's eyes which had been damaged.

MD tells why he advised abortion

The director of medicine at the Glendale Lodge told an inquest today he felt a 32-year-old severely retarded woman was emotionally incapable of handling a pregnancy and live birth.

For this reason, Dr. John Kenneth Martin said, he recommended to the Victoria General Hospital sterilization committee that the woman's pregnancy be terminated and that she be sterilized.

Martin was testifying at an inquest into the death of the woman's child, a baby boy, who died 10 hours after being born by caesarean section Sept. 18, 1978.

He told the inquest the woman's mother agreed with his views and was adamant that the pregnancy be terminated.

Martin described the woman as having a mental age of 3.3 years and said the father of the child remains unknown.

Dr. Martin testified he did not detect the pregnancy until the last week of August.

He said he examined the woman on June 16 and found nothing untoward at that time.

He said she was prone to an irregular menstrual pattern.

He said the woman was on a mixed ward with 20 other severely retarded patients, two of who, he felt, were potentially capable of fathering the child.

He said if the father was among the patients, the chances of the baby being normal were slightly over 50 per cent.

Martin's statements were made in response to questions from regional crown counsel Wally Anderson.

The inquest, called by McArthur because the death was classed as unnatural, was marked by several unusual features as it opened.

The jurors, selected from a 23-member jury panel, were challenged by McArthur as to their beliefs on abortion and pro life issues and no sooner had the jury been picked than Vancouver lawyer A.D. Thackray asked for an adjournment.

Thackray represents doctors M.W. Rippington, K.H. Chan, J.M. Dickout, M.J. Penn and Martin who are to be called as witnesses in the case.

City sues for back taxes

Under a new hardline policy against delinquent taxpayers, Victoria has initiated court action to force payment of more than $300,000 in 1979 property taxes and penalties from a number of developers.

City solicitor Jakob de Villiers filed suit in B.C. Supreme Court Tuesday against seven firms which did not pay their taxes at the June 30 deadline this year.

The largest amount — in taxes and penalties — is $79,685.13 owed by Fort Victoria Properties Ltd. Next in size is $67,886.85 owed by Abacus Cities Ltd., the owner of Market Square and other properties which recently went into receivership.

Concord Credit Ltd. is being sued for $50,333.75 and Ponteix Properties Ltd. for a total of $45,354.23. Other companies involved are Victoria Park Place Ltd. for $27,273.21, Vista Homes Ltd. for $25,199.44 and Roanne Properties Ltd. for $25,221.69.

Council authorized de Villiers last week to pursue delinquent taxpayers, down to a minimum of $2,000 owed. He said the seven cited in documents filed with the court registry on Tuesday are the first to be prosecuted under the policy.

There are others to come, but he didn't want to comment on details.

Stock market plunges while gold prices soar

reeling from increased interest rates Tuesday in Canada and the United States. All of the composite index's 14 units showed sharp declines.

Among the four most heavily-weighted groups, oil and gas issues fell 154.03 to 3,265.72, metals and minerals 67.01 to 1,515.19, financial services 36.81 to 1,209.11 and industrial products 38.81 to 1,209.11.

Among the other 10 groups, real estate and construction issues were weakest, falling 303.59 to 4,151.57.

Volume of trading at 2 p.m. was 7.47 million shares compared with 5.58 million at the same time Tuesday.

The index plunged 64.37 to 1,740.30 Tuesday, its steepest drop since the new composite was introduced at the beginning of 1976.

Gold prices catapulted by a record $25 overnight to $414.50 in Zurich from $389.50. In London it jumped $18.50 from $391.50 to $410 and rapidly advanced to $420 in dealing ahead of the morning gold fix.

The latest advances followed big increases in the gold price Tuesday. Since Monday night's closing price gold gained $45.50 in London and $42 in Zurich.

Dealers in Switzerland said the overnight jump was in line with overnight activity in New York. Speculation about high bids at today's gold auction in the United States and growing fears of further hikes in the price of crude oil spurred the market on, the dealers said.

The sudden about-turn in the price follows an equally dramatic slide last week after gold reached a record $438 an ounce. London dealers said heavy buying from the Middle East contributed to Tuesday's boost.

At the morning fixing in London the gold price came off the boil to fix at $409.25, still a gain of $17.75 on Tuesday's closing price, and by mid-morning dealers reported speculators were selling out for quick profit.

"With the dollar shaky gold went higher at the opening but has since come back slightly," said a dealer at Mocatta and Goldsmid.

On the foreign exchange markets the U.S. dollar was substantially weaker. In New York, the Canadian dollar was up 1-50 at $0.8522.

In Ottawa, meanwhile, hints surfaced that Finance Minister John Crosbie may have serious questions about the high-interest-rate economic path on which the government is embarked.

In an off-the-cuff comment to reporters Tuesday, he mentioned that one of the frustrating things about raising the bank rate is that it does not seem to deter Canadians from borrowing money and buying on credit.

Hydro in land swap

Gloucester told Hydro that if it could get the land out of the reserve, Hydro could develop about 80 acres adjacent to its Fraser Valley railway which runs through the property. B.C. Hydro Railway has a main line running from New Westminster to Chilliwack with access to downtown Vancouver on tracks leased from CP Rail.

Robertson said Columbia's main role is to bank and develop land for rail-oriented industry. It has established a number of industrial parks in Richmond, Burnaby, Surrey and on Annacis Island in the Fraser River.

Although the land committee has approved release of the land, zoning and reginal district designations still have to be changed.

The municipality of Langley earlier supported the application to the cabinet, but the regional district was opposed to changing the designation from Rural 2, the classification for upland rural areas which are free from flooding.

Langley cannot rezone the area unless the regional district first changes the classification.

Meanwhile Highways Minister Alex Fraser said the committee decided to remove the land from the reserve because it has never been farmed to any degree and has drainage problems.

"We have confidence in the land commission, but that doesn't mean we have to agree with every decision they have made," he said.

A frontal system lingering over the north coast brought some rain overnight to that region and portions of the central interior. A high pressure area over southern B.C. will remain through Thursday and extend its influence to northern regions. No significant break in the unusual warm spell is seen for the next few days over southern regions.

"Since we got our JCBs our production has doubled!"

The verdict: "nothing can compare with them for versatility and production". The result: doubled production. The reason: heavy-duty quality and precision engineering with more factory-built attachments than any other machine in their class.

There's almost no end to the ways these JCB machines can turn a profit for you. Choose from a range of loader buckets, excavator buckets, jaws and bulldozer blades; give yourself more can-do capability with a multi-purpose clam-shovel, fork lift, roadbreaker, ripper tooth, extending dipper, backfill blade, jib crane, square hole bucket, ditching bucket or bucket fork lift. You get virtually full fleet productivity for the price of a single machine.

And versatility is only part of the story. These are rugged machines, built around a tough, rigid, one-piece integral steel frame. They give you narrow-space manoeuverability, high breakout force, better hydraulics, and advanced operator comfort and visibility . . . all backed by Finning service and parts availability, no matter where you're working.

Runka replacement soon

Environment Minister Rafe Mair said today he will name a replacement for a member of the B.C. Land Commission who resigned to protest a cabinet decision to exempt a parcel of Fraser Valley land from the agricultural land reserve.

Mair said a successor to Gary Runka will be found before his resignation becomes effective at the end of the month, which means the commission will have a quorum and can continue operating.

Mair also said he may fill the other holes on the commission benches and might appoint a new chairman to replace Axel Kinnear, who was appointed for only a three-month period nine months ago.

Mair said he regrets Runka's decision to resign after the environment and land use committee overruled the land commission and decided to allow 626 acres of Langley farmland out of the reserve.

"I'm a little cynical about the spontenaity of the resignation because it's been my understanding he was going to leave in any event fairly shortly," Mair said.

He said he supports the decision that triggered Runka's resignation because communities in the Fraser Valley must have some industrial development.

He said he sees nothing wrong with B.C. Hydro intervening on behalf of the developer, Gloucester properties Ltd., or with a member of Gloucester's board of directors working for Health Minister Bob McClelland in the last election.

Kelly resignation end of 'lettergate': Kempf

By PAUL NICHOLSON

Socred caucus chairman Jack Kempf said Tuesday as far as he is concerned, the resignation of caucus researcher Jack Kelly closes the so-called "lettergate" matter.

At a hastily-called press conference to announce his acceptance of Kelly's resignation, Kempf, the MLA for Omineca, was peppered with questions for more than 45 minutes about other workers' involvement in the dirty tricks campaign that led to Kelly quitting.

Kelly and fellow researcher Ellen Mackay were under the jurisdiction of chief researcher Glen Mitchell in August last year when the media manipulation campaign began.

A series of tapes was made suggesting various ways dirty tricks that could be used to manipulate the media. All three researcher's voices are on the tape. Some 170 copies of the tapes were sent to constituencies to help them with the election campaign.

Mitchell left the caucus in June to become executive assistant to Education Minister Pat McGeer.

Kempf said he has no jurisdiction over Mitchell now that he no longer works for the caucus.

If any action is to be taken against Mitchell, it would be up to McGeer, he said.

McGeer insisted, however, that Mitchell is not involved.

KELLY
. . . poor choice of words

"Mr. Mitchell is not associated in any way with this and I have no comment to make," he said.

When it was pointed out to McGeer that Mitchell was research chief at the time the tapes were made and that his voice is on them, McGeer, backing into his office said: "Yes, but he was not involved in any of this."

McGeer was apparently referring to the September meeting of the Esquimalt-Port Renfrew constituency association where Kelly suggested people could put false names on letters to the newspapers if they wished to remain anonymous.

That statement was recorded by a newspaper reporter and the subsequent publicity led to the discovery of the dirty tricks tapes the researches put together for the constituencies.

Ellen Mackay is holidaying in Europe and Kempf said he won't discuss her involvement until she returns next week and he has a chance to talk to her.

Kempf said his investigation did not take him beyond the bounds of the Esquimalt-Port Renfrew meeting until the matter of the tapes came up.

He said he is convinced no illegal activities were ever carried out, but the fact they were even suggested meant he had to accept Kelly's resignation.

He said he is not interested in carrying the investigation further or to look into allegations at least one false letter was sent to newspapers by a worker in the premier's office.

But McCarthy told reporters the matter is closed with the resignation of Kelly.

The minister said earlier she didn't know she was being taped when she gave a speech on how to canvass at the meeting of constituency presidents a year ago.

But it was learned her executive assistant, George Lenko, commissioned the making of the tapes and hired the sound man to record the presentations of McCarthy and the three researchers.

Kelly said he bears no grudges.

"I still believe in the political system. I never used any dirty tricks and I don't believe in them," he said after resigning Friday.

"I made a mistake. It was an unfortunate choosing of words on my part. A better explanation would have been one-upmanship."

He said the intent of the researchers' presentation was to show party workers ways to do things better than the NDP.

Dead body found in census

VANCOUVER (CP) — Enumerator Irene Leonard was doing a body count of dwelling occupants when she stumbled onto the real thing June 28, 1978 — the body of 91-year-old George Dickinson.

Miss Leonard, giving evidence Tuesday on the first day at the juvenile court trial of a 17-year-old youth charged with murder, told Provincial Court Judge Malcolm MacDonald she rushed to call police.

This is believed to be the first juvenile trial in Canada open to media coverage. Earlier this year Judge MacDonald ruled the media could report on the trial provided they didn't identify the youth.

The British Columbia Court of Appeals upheld his decision after it was reversed when challenged in Supreme Court.

The judge warned newsmen that the accused youth must not in any way be identified.

Prosecutor Larry Jackie told the court he will call evidence to show Dickinson lived alone in his small house and was slain during a robbery attempt.

A civilian member of the city police department told the court he fingerprinted the youth in 1976 when the lad — at that time 13 years old — was charged with breaking and entering.

UFAWU executives off contempt hook

VANCOUVER (CP) — Three fishermen were let off the hook Tuesday by a British Columbia Supreme Court decision which acquitted them of charges of contempt by the Restrictive Trade Practices Commission.

Jack Nichol, Homer Stevens and George Hewison, three executives of the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union, were charged with contempt and threatened with penalties after they refused to answer questions raised earlier this year during an inquiry into the production, purchase, sale and processing of fish in B.C.

Mr. Justice H. C. McKay ruled that the fishermen are workmen and are included in a section in the Combines Investigation Act which exempts employees and workers from answering questions relating to internal union policies and decisions.

STEVENS
. . . refusal upheld

"Fishermen would certainly seem to be workmen in the sense that word is used in ordinary speech," said Mr. Justice McKay. "One would have difficulty in convincing a deckhand on a fishing boat that he is not a workman."

Nichol, president of the fishermen's union, said the ruling is "a welcome relief," but that the investigation is not quashed by the ruling.

"It shows they have no power to punish us but the investigation is still going on. The ruling will just narrow the scope of it."

Pork banned

TEHRAN (Reuter) — Iranian religious authorities have issued an order banning the production and sale of pork, considered by Moslems to be unclean.

Tip of the iceberg

External Affairs Minister Flora MacDonald's "nice-guy" speech last week touched a sympathetic nerve with many Canadians.

MacDonald said Canada has played the role of "international nice guy" too long. She referred particularly to our foreign aid program under which Canada has offered aid to countries that have promptly turned around and condemned us as imperialists. At the recent conference of so-called non-aligned nations, for example, Pakistan, recipient of millions of dollars in Canadian aid each year, was in the forefront of those labelling us an imperialist nation.

There's a certain common sense appeal about MacDonald's attitude. Intuitively it just doesn't seem right that Canada should be handing over good money and resources to countries that slap us in the face in the international arena.

There's also some sound foreign relations logic behind MacDonald's approach. It really doesn't make very good sense to offer material aid to strengthen countries that are so opposed to Canada ideologically that their growing strength could pit them against us in the tenuous political balance of the world.

Yet before the Canadian government can begin to act on the principles of the minister's speech, it should surely take a much more detailed look at the goals and objectives of Canada's whole foreign aid program. The issue MacDonald raised is barely the tip of a huge iceberg of conflicting and contradictory policies and questions.

Just what is Canada's foreign aid program setting out to accomplish? What do we perceive to be the community of interest between ourselves, as a giving nation, and the less developed countries to which we wish to offer aid?

Is that community of interest purely a humanitarian one? Do we wish to be entirely altruistic in our motives, giving aid only because we want to help the less fortunate human beings on this earth?

If so, we should be giving our aid to the neediest countries without regard to their political and economic systems. Our only concern should be the establishment of standards to ensure that the aid reaches the poor for whom it is intended and is not siphoned off into the pockets of the rich or frittered away by inefficient bureaucrats.

If this is our objective, we should also look carefully at the sort of aid we are offering. The emphasis should first be on short-term programs to prevent any imminent starvation and then on longer-term programs to develop agricultural self-sufficiency. It probably does not, for instance, make sense to help in the development of automobile factories or other oil-guzzling industries in the Third World countries when we ourselves are trying to develop alternatives to oil consumption. Programs utilizing simple tools and domestic animals might be more effective.

Perhaps, however, it is also logical for Canada to require some type of other community of interest with those to whom we are giving aid. One obvious criterion would be political community of interest.

In its least extreme form, this would see Canada declining to offer aid to countries whose ideologies are diametrically opposed to ours. In its most extreme form, recipient countries could be required to be generally uncritical and accepting of the Canadian government — though this would be small-minded, politically risky, and difficult to enforce.

Another approach to foreign aid could take into account Canadian domestic economic goals. Should aid programs be created to help Canadian private industries set up branch plants in Third World countries — branch plants which would also help the growth of the recipient countries? Or would some domestic industries — food-processing, for instance — be fortified if the Canadian government bought their products for shipment to the Third World as part of the foreign aid program?

Each of these approaches to foreign aid has some merits and some disadvantages. Each would lead to a different emphasis in Canada's aid program for the 1980s.

The government should examine these options and others to decide Canada's goals for its foreign aid program. Once that is done, the issues raised in MacDonald's speech and many other questions can be answered rationally on the basis of predetermined objectives.

Let them know

I certainly do agree with your editorial, Discourage Head Hunters (Times, Oct. 3). One day in the not so distant future people are going to wake up to find there are no more wild animals here to go out and kill for fun and sport and profit.

I don't really think there are too many hunters who have to do it or starve.

The only hunting story I like is the skit put on by Jonathan Winters in which a bunch of he-men take off on a hunting trip, taking the usual bottles to fortify them and ending up knocking off each other, accidentally of course.

And as for people from Sweden or anywhere else being encouraged to come here to kill because they don't have any more animals left in their own countries, anything for the tourists! At least this is what too many of our politicians appear to think.

Those of the rest of us who don't agree with this should let our politicians know about it right now!

Before it's too late. — E. Wakefield, 501-1950 Bee Street.

Hunting has mild impact on Spatsizi compared to development.

Overrunning abode

I am sending your editorial 'Discourage Head Hunters' to a friend and former employer who is a northern B.C. guide and outfitter and I can picture him sadly shaking his head as he reads it. Let me speak for him.

Spatsizi Provincial Park will not save our caribou herd, even if the limited hunting now allowed were stopped. Its boundaries were severely compromised by resource conflicts and therefore do not protect the fertile lowlands where the caribou congregate in winter to feed. The quest for minerals, timber and electricity by a society which is becoming a slave to its creature comforts has overrun the caribous' abode.

Into our society's dilemma Greenpeace has carved itself a comfortable niche. Cutting a thousand year silence with the chop of their helicopter they draw attention to themselves by attacking a group of people too busy with their day to day living to publicly defend themselves (unlike Hydro, Foresty and Mines). As they flew over the park did they notice the abandoned railway grade cutting up the bunchgrass valley, or B.C. Hydro crews testing their proposed dam sites on the Sitkine River? Do their office staff know of the thousands of square miles of wildlife habitat now at the bottom of Williston lake? The lake that gives Vancouver light. Right now Cats are pushing roads into areas foolishly left out of the park.

Greenpeace is as physically and spiritually removed from the northern B.C. wilderness as they are from Newfoundland. Caribou can avoid hunters but they cannot avoid the destruction of their habitat. — C. Peter Simonsen, 3867 Hobbs Street.

Poor editorial

I have finally been motivated to write to the paper, thanks to the very poor editorial on Parklands School and smoking.

The staff at the school have a time table of supervision to follow when the students are not in class, and the execution of this duty should not be described as "spying". I am sure the public would be the first to complain if the staff were lax in this aspect of a teacher's job.

Discussion regarding smoking in Parkland has taken place every year since the school opened, and a few different approaches have been taken. There are many ideas of what should be done, and everyone has his own story of what worked elsewhere; so the school did not make a hasty decision.

The editor's suggestion that smoking be allowed in the cafeteria is extremely unfair to non-smokers who wish to eat in a clean atmosphere. A question of human rights . . . but why bother?

I feel that the present rule regarding smoking has reduced the number of smokers, and no one is under the illusion that it can be stopped completely. The editorial is really the old "You're dammed if you do and dammed if you don't" syndrome.

Regarding the comment, "The more parental or school authority insists that something is bad, the more the teenager wants it" — if only that were true? I would insist that all education is bad, and as a teacher I would have it made.

In finishing, I must admit that I do find allowing adults to smoke in the school building an unfortunate reversal of a school board decision. — C. Doman, 934 Birch Road, Sidney.

Tracing friend

I wonder if any of your readers might have any information about a veteran of World War II named Karl Hans Hesse? During a visit to the United Kingdom this summer we met some people who had apparently been very good friends of this man when he was stationed in Britain. They had kept up a correspondence for some years, but apparently have not heard from him for a very long time; they would very much like to know if he is still alive and to hear how he is.

Before the war he had apparently been a fisherman on one of the Gulf Islands; his father was a German immigrant and his mother a Native Indian. He was in the Royal Canadian Engineers.

If anyone has any information about him, we should very much like to hear from them. — Mrs. C.C. Martin, 3982 Cedar Hill Road.

Sky blue bridge

Oh what a beautiful morning! The Johnson Street Bridge is in use and what a bridge! Victoria's latest tourist attraction, costly handpainted sky blue! Did we get a special on paint if we would buy blue, with a matching boat tied up near by? Are we trying to match our usually beautiful blue sky? Perhaps it could be re-named the Blue Sky Bridge. Sarnia, Ontario, has the Blue Water Bridge — not nearly so striking. Now we have another point of interest to add to our handsome harbor scene. It's great. Thank you, City of Victoria. — E. Hartley, Victoria.

CLAUDE ADAMS

The Pope becomes a personality

WASHINGTON — Jesuit Father William Callahan, his protest banner well away from the altar where Pope John Paul II was celebrating mass, was bemoaning the shrinking ranks of the U.S. priesthood as a cold wind cut through the crowd of worshippers.

He was talking about celibacy, about women in the church and other aspects of rigid Catholic dogma. "In 10 years," he said, "three-quarters of U.S. priests will be over 65. There are fewer and fewer seminarians. Parishes are being abandoned.

"When is the church going to face facts?"

Two hundred yards away, John Paul raised his arms in prayer against the backdrop of the U.S. Capitol building. Was Fr. Callahan angry at the pontiff, a sworn traditionalist?

He's neat

"Oh, heavens, no. We all love him." Then a wide grin lit up the bearded face, and he uttered an unJesuitical appraisal. "He's neat."

In his 2,000-mile tour that ended Sunday, with his words "God bless America," John Paul II introduced a cult of personality into the U.S. Catholic church and calmed, at least for a while, a loud and growing activism.

The church may be in trouble, Americans like Fr. Callahan said all week, but the Pontiff's warmth transcends the hard-line moral doctrine that sits so uneasily here.

Peter McAnally heads a 120-member group of homosexuals in the Washington area. Earlier in the week, in Chicago, the Pope had condemned homosexual acts as "morally wrong."

He stood under a giant banner that said "Dignity." Hundreds of Washingtonians on the Mall shouted that the banner was blocking their view of the Pontiff. McAnally ordered it taken down. The people applauded.

"We are all excited to have him here," McAnally said. "We need to deal in steps and John Paul, though he condemned our acts, has opened the door a bit by saying we are a part of the Catholic ministry.

"What pope would even have used the word homosexual 10 years ago?"

Among the five million Americans who greeted Pope John Paul II in six cities were thousands of people of faiths other than Roman Catholic.

He was an event. On his final day here, even members of the press were heard to shout: "Come back to America." Lutherans, Baptists and Jews cheered him on the Mall, and in all the city parks where he had celebrated mass.

The strongest critics of church policy genuflected before him. The most moving illustration of this came on Sunday morning after Sister Theresa Kane, leader of a national group of religious women, had greeted the Pope with strong words about the "pain and suffering" of many U.S. Catholic women.

John Paul listened, his face grimly set, as Sister Kane pleaded that the church include women in his hierarchy. Among the audience of 6,000 nuns, more than half sat quietly as if embarrassed by the force of her plea.

Other women made their protests in other ways. Feminists carried banners saying things like "Ordain women or stop baptizing them."

Connie O'Toole, a 17-year-old Maryland girl of Irish background, struck a more personal blow. As a thousand priests passed out communion wafers behind fences on the periphery of the Mall, Connie forced her way through the surging lines.

She was nervous, fidgeting and rubbing her hands, and almost changed her mind. Then the moment came. An elderly priest reached out with the wafer and consecrated it while moving it toward her lips.

Connie pulled her head back slightly and recited three sentences she had memorized: "This Eucharist is a sign of discrimination. I cannot receive it. I am sorry you are taking part."

For an instant, the priest's face fell. Her deed done, Connie turned to a reporter and said with relief: "There, that wasn't so hard."

As he swept through the northeast aboard his special jet, dubbed Shepherd One, the Pope left other critics in his wake — liberal priests, athiests, and diplomats from authoritarian nations who resented his eloquent attacks on political suppression and torture.

But they were swamped in a wave of public affection, pushed into the background by a world leader expert in stagecraft and wise in the ways of the media.

Just a few hours before his final homily to the nation — a tough manifesto of Catholic traditionalism on birth control, abortion and family life — John Paul took a few minutes out to bless the journalists who had been following him for a week.

It was a brilliant touch as he wished them well in a half-dozen languages. They were delighted.

He wove the same spell on a group of Catholic university students, chanting "I love you, I love you, I love you" in a cheer-leading fashion that drove the students wild.

Then, speaking on the Mall, he put on his sternest face and the laughter ended. John Paul saved his strongest words for the last, going so far as to encourage parents to have more children in their role as "fellow-workers" to God, the author of life.

Mostly, it was a message on the sanctity of human life.

His words echoing from the museums that border the Mall, he said:

"I do not hesitate to proclaim before you and before the world that all human life — from the moment of conception and through all subsequent stages — is sacred . . ."

He even suggested that childless marriages were against God's design. For the total good of the Christian couple, he said, "life should spring up within the setting of marriage."

Only when he inveighed against divorce — mutual love becoming "two loves of self" — did the crowd remain quiet, their enthusiasm momentarily quelled.

The Pope saved perhaps his most surprising comment while discussing the size of families. This, to a nation moving ever closer to zero population growth:

". . . guided by the teaching of the church, parents will remind themselves that it is certainly less serious to deny their children certain amounts of material advantages than to deprive them of the presence of brothers and sisters . . ."

At the fringes of the crowd, Gerry McMurray, a civil servant and father of two, shook his head and made a slashing comment: "He's out of touch with reality. I can't take his views seriously. Does he know anything aoout the cost of raising the family.

"What about medicine, food and clothing? Are these the material advantages he is talking about: Has he ever heard about inflation, the cost of living?"

Selling souvenirs

John Paul also said that no one "ever" has the right to abort a child, that the family bond must bear up under "social and economic pressures," and that Catholics must loudly reaffirm human justice for all.

Realizing that John Paul's visit was fast approaching its end, souvenir hawkers frantically slashed their prices. Pope buttons went three for a dollar. An "authentic" portrait of the Pope complete with halo, supposedly commissioned by John Paul himself, was reduced to $1.50.

Youths selling small vials of holy water, supposed blessed by the Pope as he had passed in his limousine, dropped from $3 to $1.

As he prepared to drive to Edwards Air Force Base and his flight to Rome, thousands of Washingtonians raced to line up along the motorcade route for a final look.

A final look at the figure in the red papal hat, waving from his open car. Then he was gone.

The pope's visit: 'Yes, but . . .'

By CONOR CRUISE O'BRIEN

(O'Brien is editor-in-chief of The Observer of London and wrote this for The New York Times)

As the pope talked to the people, in Ireland and the United States, the charisma of the office and the charm of the man fused into one remarkable, and somewhat inscrutable, phenomenon.

The crowds watching the pope, in city after city, were said by commentators to be "profoundly moved." The crowds themselves, and countless others who merely watched on television agreed, and felt themselves to be profoundly moved.

Yes, but moved in what direction? Moved to do what?

I have found by personal experience in Ireland and — perhaps more surprisingly — in Britain, that to say "yes, but . . ." about the pope is not a passport to popularity.

People feel better for watching the pope, and want others to tell them that they feel better too, and that, somehow, because of this, things are going to be better.

If I could see any sign that people are behaving better, after watching and seeing the pope, I would feel that they had indeed been "profoundly moved," and I would rejoice, and stop asking questions beginning with "yes, but . . . " Unfortunately, I can see no sign at all of such an improvement. Of course, there may be a delayed effect. But, for the moment, it is clearly business as usual.

It may be that the the language of Pope John Paul II about the Middle East will exert a pacifying influence in that region. It may be that, after Zehdi Terzi kissed the pope's ring at the United Nations, the Palestine Liberation Organization will be a little more disposed to negotiation and a little less to terror than in the past.

I do not know about that. I do know a bit about the pope's visit to Ireland. There, he was received with something as close to adoration as can ever have been offered to a human being. This man, so taken to the hearts of all the people, is also their supreme pastor — in that '97 per cent Roman Catholic Republic — in their eyes, Christ's vicar on earth, in matters of faith and morals the infallible teacher.

And his words had, so far as I can judge, no effect at all.

The pope condemned violence, repeatedly and in strong terms. The Irish Republican Army then gave a press conference in which it announced its intention of carrying on as usual.

One of the speakers, a Belfast man, was reported as saying: "The people from this city had welcomed the pope. They had waved their flags and cheered with the rest of Ireland, but nevertheless they were still prepared to support the republican movement." ("The republican movement" is the IRA's term for itself and its followers.)

The speaker was right about those for whom he spoke. Those who sympathize with the IRA are a minority in Ireland, but not an insignificant one — perhaps 10 per cent to 15 per cent. And that minority cheered the pope, and went on sympathizing with the killers. He condemned violence? So do we: The violence is caused by the presence of the British Army. He called for justice? That is exactly what we are fighting for.

Will the contending parties in the Middle East react any differently to the pope's words? I doubt it.

Insofar as it is good to make people feel good, the pope's journey was a triumphant success. It poured happiness into many lives that have known little of that. That in itself is a noble achievement.

But the achievement should be seen as that, and not something else.

A temporary mood of popular elation is not a solution to any problem, nor is it particularly conducive to the solving of problems.

Will anyone be changed?

In the news media's coverage of the pope's visit to Ireland, the very possibility of rational assessment seemed to be submerged under waves of emotion.

Yet it is through the use of reason, not by act of faith, that political problems have to be solved. Faith — of conflicting kinds — is part of the problem.

The pope's charismatic pilgrimage tended, on the whole, to weaken the already precarious grip of human reason over human affairs.

That is why I would respond to the beloved pilgrim with a respectful "yes, but . . ."

ANTHONY LEWIS
The New York Times

It was awkward surgery on a self-inflicted wound, and performed well enough considering the difficulty. But it remains to be seen whether President Carter's speech can repair the damage done to the strategic arms treaty by his own administration's foolishness over Soviet troops in Cuba.

The best thing about the president's speech was what he did not say. He did not announce that American aircraft carriers were steaming toward Havana, or that the United States was taking major retaliatory action against the Soviet Union. He resisted urgings that he make this pipsqueak affair the occasion for a confrontation with Moscow.

And pipsqueak it is. It turns out that this Soviet military unit has been in Cuba for years. It has no airborne or seaborne capability — 2,000 to 3,000 soldiers without a canoe. That such a force could cause hysteria in Washington, the capitol of a great power, is pathetic.

The triviality of the "threat" could and should have been made clear by the administration at the start, a month ago. Instead the State Department fed an alarmist intelligence report to Sen. Frank Church, who puffed up his political chest. Secretary Vance, who of all people should have known better, called the Soviet brigade "a very serious matter." He and then the president said "The status quo is not acceptable."

The ambivalent words about "the status quo" were an even worse mistake than inflating a misleading intelligence report. For they raised expectations that the Russians might agree under pressure to pull out the brigade — which was never a serious possibility.

When the president spoke the other night, his problem was that he had to take the episode seriously, or why make a speech at all? So he announced such fearsome steps as the establishment of a new 60-man task force headquarters in Key West. But he made clear the modest character of the Soviet unit and put it back into the larger perspective of superpower relations.

Carter rather underplayed one diplomatic gain. This was the Soviet Union's undertaking not to enlarge the unit in Cuba or to change its stated function as a "training centre." Even more important, the Soviets have reaffirmed their commitment, made at the end of the missile crisis in 1962, not to introduce offensive weapons into Cuba.

After the 1962 crisis, books were written to explain how the Kennedy administration had dealt with it so successfully — by a careful, skilful combination of diplomacy and politics. Someone ought to write a book about this episode as a bad example of politics and diplomacy mixed in disarray between the executive and the Senate.

For Carter there is a redeeming end to the tale: the effective handling of the speech and the run-up to it, with the Wise Old Men brought in to build consensus. That approach bore the stamp of the president's new counsel, Lloyd Cutler.

The Senate comes out of the affair with little glory except for Majority Leader Robert Byrd, who saw it as a "pseudo-crisis" and wisely said it was senseless to demand a change in the status quo "until we knew more precisely what the status quo was." Church treated the strategic arms treaty as less important than his re-election. The minority leader, Howard Baker, vying with Church in opportunism, said after the Carter speech: "In a toe-to-toe confrontation we blinked."

If Baker's remark means anything except that he would like to find some easy way to become president, it must mean that he would have turned this episode into a real confrontation with the Soviet Union. But statesmanship has always required a sense of proportion, and even more so in the nuclear age. A serious politician does not think of turning molehills into superpower confrontations.

The real issue of American security remains what it has been all through these weeks of foolishness about the Soviet brigade: nuclear arms control. If the SALT treaty is not ratified, the Soviets would be free to instal between 3,000 and 8,000 extra nuclear warheads on missiles pointed at the United States. That is the stake in ratification — a little more important than 3,000 foot soldiers.

If the debate in the Senate and the country can now get back to the merits of the treaty, it ought to prevail. For the remarkable fact is that the opponents did not lay a glove on it in the long committee hearings. They showed that the treaty does not reduce nuclear arsenals as most of us wish it would. But they could not get away from the essential truth that it imposes some ceilings, in particular keeping the Russians from exploiting their present advantage in heavy missiles. And even Sen. Barry Goldwater agreed that we can adequately verify compliance.

Of course there are some who oppose the treaty for an unanswerable reason. They dislike the Soviet regime so much that they do not want to make any agreement with it, even one to avoid mutual annihilation. But I think few Americans would take that view — just as few outside of Washington were affected by its hysteria over the troops in Cuba.

Some funny goings-on in the Okanagan

An Editorial

There's a nasty smell rising from Okanagan Lake these days and it's not from rotting fish or milfoil.

It is being generated by developers who would dot 9,000 hectares of rangeland on either side of the lake near Kelowna with four-hectare and eight-hectare ranchettes.

Not for them the 65-hectare minimum lot size laid down by the Central Okanagan Regional District. The smaller lots, if only they could get them, could generate between $40 million and $60 million in cool, hard cash.

The directors of the regional district are evidently undergoing a struggle with their consciences on this matter. Whether awed by the fact that Premier Bill Bennett's trust, the children of his brother, R.J., and the brothers Joe, Herb, and Tom Capozzi are among the 60 landowners who stand to benefit, the directors seem to be wavering.

For some reason the regional plan adopted only three years ago, which set out the 65-hectare ground rule, is not yet above compromise.

The district's technical planning committee says it shouldn't be compromised, a review committee composed of nine provincial civil servants says it shouldn't be, the B.C. Federation of Agriculture and the B.C. Cattlemen's Associaton say it shouldn't be, the fruit growers, grape growers, even the Agricultural Land Commission, all say it shouldn't be. But the directors aren't so sure any more. They have put off a decision for a month. Why isn't clear, but five of the eight directors are already said to be leaning toward compromise.

It's difficult to understand the dilemma when surveys have apparently shown there are 4,050 hectares of potential urban development land within the Kelowna boundaries, without even considering the privately owned 9,000 hectares of rangeland or another 9,000 hectares of crown land protected by the 65-hectare limit.

That's always supposing that the district is interested in accommodating another 90,000 people by the year 2000.

And if it isn't interested in accommodating those people, the next question is: Who is it interested in accommodating ?

Come back, Dizzy

The American language, like the American dollar, seems to be losing vitality. The evidence is everywhere. The once brisk American spoken by politicians has decayed into a tongue that can only be called "mushmouth." The young cult of sociology, needing a young language, has invented one. There are many dead languages, but the sociologists' is the only language that was dead at birth.

A particular grievous example is the decline of American in the baseball industry. Until quite recently the language spoken by baseball's practitioners and hangers-on crackled with terseness, vibrancy and metaphor. Now it is becoming as arid as the tongue of the federal bureaucrat and shows alarming signs of drift toward the mumbo-jumbo jabber of sociology.

"Ryan has good velocity and excellent location" is a sentence that was actually uttered by a baseball man on television one night this year. "Velocity" and "location," in fact, have become commonplace words at the ball park.

On first hearing, they sound as though they might refer to something happening in a physics laboratory. "The ionized particle has good velocity and excellent location as it approaches the quark."

In the above sentence, however, they refer to the speed and accuracy with which a thrown baseball approaches the batter's plate. If Ryan has good velocity and excellent location, he is throwing very fast and putting the ball where he wants to. Before baseball American became so desiccated, the sentence might have been:

"Ryan is throwing smoke and nicking the corners."

This may not be poetry, but in competition with "Ryan has good velocity and excellent location" it is pure Shakespeare.

Sports language used to be some of the most colorful this side of the underworld. A baseball player suspected of familiarity with words like "velocity" and "location" would have been hooted across diamond and sports page as "The Professor," "Egghead Ernie" or "Harvard Jaws Harry."

The disappearance of such nicknames is another measure of baseball American's waning vitality. When the tongue was robust, it produced such sobriquets — always pronounced "soup-brick-gays" in that time — as "Poosh-'em-up Tony," "King Kong Keller," "Bananas Bonura," "Twinkletoes Selkirk," "Shotgun Shuba," "The Sultan of Swat," a.k.a. "The Bambino," "Leo the Lip," "Stan the Man," "Rabbit Maranville," "Harry the Cat," and "Ducky Medwick."

This list barely skims the surface. Today half the baseball players on earth are named "Rick," and sports writers, or whoever is supposed to make baseball players interesting, are content to leave them "Rick." The exception proving the rule is Rick Burleson, sometimes called "The Rooster."

The decline of poetic imagination among sports writers is well illustrated in Boston, the locus of Burleson's place of business. Though fortified with the nation's highest concentration of sports writers ("scribes" they were called in better days), Boston's baseballers are singularly nickname-poor.

So dim is the poetic impulse that Carl Yaztrzemski, the presiding hero of the Red Sox, must get by with the unimaginatively shortened "Yaz." The third baseman, Butch Hobson, is treated even worse, becoming "The Butcher" in an idiotic lengthening of his nickname, while the best pitcher, Dennis Eckersley, must appear in print and issue from the mouths of broadcasters as "The Eck," a disgusting sound approximating the noise of regurgitation.

Why baseball American should be so impoverished at a moment when the sport is flourishing as never before is anyone's guess. Mine is that it is going through a period of highbrow pretension, brought on perhaps by the hordes of college men cluttering up the locker rooms and the advent of high-falutin' sports writers too self-conscious about their master's degrees in creative writing to risk playing a kid's game at the typewriter.

So we have solemn laboratory talk about velocity and location and no replacements for all those colorful baseball phenomena ("phenoms," in the old style) who have vanished. The "nifty little lefty" is gone, gone with "the canny portsider," and all we have in their place is "the left-hander." There are no longer "ducks on the pond," double plays no longer travel "around the horn," brilliant shortstops no longer "cavort around the keystone bag," "gazelles" no longer "roam the pasture," "titans" no longer "clash in the fall classic."

What we have left is The New Yorker's understatement rendered with the stylistic elegance of U.S. News & World Report. It is enough to make a man pine for Dizzy Dean, who having been struck in the foot by a batted ball, waited on the mound while a doctor examined him. "This toe is fractured," the doctor said. To which Dean replied, "Fractured, hell! The damn thing's broken." In those days nobody could have said anything else.

Today's Markets

Toronto

TORONTO (CP) — Broad and heavy losses continued to dominate the stock market in active mid-afternoon trading Wednesday.

The TSE 300 index fell 64.26 to 1,676.08 as a wave of selling continued since interest rates were raised this week in Canada and the United States. All of the composite index's 14 units showed sharp declines.

Among the four most heavily-weighted groups, oil and gas dropped 154.03 to 3,265.72, metals and minerals 67.01 to 1,515.19, industrial products 38.81 to 1,209.11 and financial services 36.81 to 1,150.26.

Among the other 10 groups, real estate and construction issues showed the heaviest losses dropping 303.59 to 4,151.57.

Vancouver

Prices were down in heavy trading today on the Vancouver Stock Exchange. Volume to 10:52 a.m. PDT was 4,494,115 shares.

In the industrials, British Columbia Resources Investment Corp. was down .20 at $7 1-2 on 190,620 shares and Taro Industries was down .05 at $3.50 on 4,000. Ardiem Industrial Corp. was unchanged at .25 on 2,000 and Grouse Mountain was up .01 at .72 on 1,600. Balco Industries was down 3-4 at $6 5-8 and Hal Roach Studios was unchanged at $3.25.

On the resource and development board, Pyx Exploration was down .28 at $1,12 on 675,200 shares and Canalta Resources was unchanged at .87 on 346,500. Action Resources was down .29 at $2.31 on 53,100.

New York

The stock market fell sharply in an avalanche of trading today as investors felt the impact of Federal Reserve Board moves that drove up interest rates and worried about the possibility of a deep recession.

Analysts said much of the drop was due to selling by traders who bought their shares on borrowed money and who are growing reluctant to pay interest rates well above 15 per cent.

The market's sharp declines this week do not come close to matching the crash of October of 1929, when stock prices lost nearly 50 per cent of their value in a few weeks time. Since Monday, by contrast, the loss amounts to a loss of between seven and eight per cent.

London

The stock market was lower near the close of moderate trading today.

The Financial Times index was down 9.5 at 473.4 about an hour before the close.

Canadian issues were as much as $1 lower following sharp losses on Wall Street.

B.C. ponders appeal on court's heroin ruling

. . . 'bit of a blow'

The provincial government is considering appealing the B.C. Supreme Court decision Tuesday which declared a major portion of the compulsory heroin treatment program unconstitutional.

Health Minister Bob McClelland, the main force behind the controversial program, said health and attorney-general ministry officials are studying the lengthy decision with a view to appealing to the Supreme Court of Canada.

Attorney-General Garde Gardom said it is too early to assess the implications of the judgment but his lawyers are looking into it.

Chief Justice Allan McEachern ruled the Heroin Treatment Act goes beyond the powers of the provincial legislature because it invades the federal field of criminal law and creates a new crime of narcotic dependency.

He said the legislation is in effect the same as the federal Narcotics Control Act and that the Social Credit government overstepped its bounds by passing the law last year.

The ruling came on a constitutional challenge launched by convicted drug addict Brenda Ruth Schneider of Burnaby who has been on a methadone maintenance program since 1969.

Her action was supported by the B.C. Civil Liberties Association. Civil libertarians have railed against the law since the concept was announced in August, 1977.

McClelland said at a press conference only hours after the court ruling that although the decision is a bit of a blow, it reinforces the need for the federal government to take action in the serious field of drug addiction.

McClelland said he will meet with federal ministers of health, solicitor-general and justice to press them to change federal legislation concering compulsory treatment.

The minister said the province is "honor-bound" to continue with the voluntary and court referral aspects of the treatment program.

He said the government never proclaimed the controversial compulsory treatment sections of the act, pending the court's decision.

All addicts treated at Brannen Lake near Nanaimo are either there voluntarily or were referred, at their own request, for treatment by the courts.

Former NDP Health Minister Dennis Cocke, who led the Opposition benches' attack on the program in the legislature last year, said McClelland should have listened to the NDP.

He said between $14 and $24 million of the taxpayers' money has already been wasted on the program.

"I hope he's happy."

Civil liberties association spokesman Dr. Reg Robson said his faction is elated over the judgment.

"Mounting a case like this needs a sustained effort and an enormous amount of money and voluntary time."

Chief Justice McEachern rejected claims on behalf of the attorney-general that the Heroin Treatment Act is health legislation.

He admitted the argument was the strongest part of the attorney-general's case, but said he couldn't accept it because the legislation was aimed not at aiding public health but at a relatively small segment of society already dependent upon narcotics.

He noted that the act provides for compulsory treament, including detention, for fixed periods of up to three years.

"The real subject matter of this legislation, in my opinion, is criminal law."

The chief justice made it clear he had not decided there could be no legislation providing for detention or compulsory treatment, but only that such a law cannot validly be passed by a provincial legislature.

Mrs. Schneider said she was happy with the decision.

"The main thing is we got rid of that compulsory program, which is what we wanted. However, there should still be a hospital in B.C. to treat addicts on a voluntary basis."

Private firm quits car insurance field

VANCOUVER (CP) — Commercial Union Assurance has decided to suspend its private automobile insurance coverage because of economic pressures, company spokesman Ray Dove said Tuesday.

Dove said the company decided to issue no more private automobile insurance polices until it can review and study the matter.

"We just wanted to look the thing over following the introduction of the FAIR program," he said.

Commercial Union is the second private insurance company to pull out of automobile coverage in the past month. There are 10 private companies offering auto insurance in British Columbia.

Royal Insurance, the province's largest private insurance company, announced earlier this month it was scrapping private insurance. It said that the Insurance Corp. of B.C.'s FAIR (fundamental auto insurance rates) system is an "unworkable exercise in monopoly" which makes it impossible for private firms to compete.

The FAIR program introduced by the Crown corporation is aimed at removing age, sex and regional discrimination from automobile insurance rates.

Commercial Union has issued about 20,000 policies worth an estimated $2 million since it moved into the private automobile insurance field in January, Dove said. The company will continue to honor existing policies but will offer no new ones for the time being, he said.

Seamen's beef settled

A picket line set up by nine seaman at the Institute of Ocean Sciences was withdrawn about noon Tuesday, less than 24 hours after the men walked off the Pandora II.

The crew members aboard the vessel, leased to the federal government by Chistiansen Canadian Enterprises, walked off the ship Monday to protest against the absence of a contract.

Dave Crain, business agent of Local 4 of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers, said the last contract expired the end of June.

He said all issues had been resolved except wages.

Management had offered a 75-cent-an-hour increase over 12 months but the seamen had rejected it.

Crain said a settlement was reached after telephone negotiations with a representative of Chistiansen in Halifax.

The agreement will see the seamen get 75 cents more an hour until the end of the year and an additional 25 cents an hour after that.

Relying on world rights after titanic miscalculation

Scott's World

By Vernon Scott

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Those who watched the recent television screening of the S.O.S. Titanic may not have realized the $7 million spectacle was the most expensive made-for-TV movie ever.

The three-hour account of the 1912 sinking of the "unsinkable" luxury liner and the loss of 1,603 passengers and crew members represents the most ambitious TV film in the history of commercial television.

The magnitude of the film, which stars David Janssen, Cloris Leachman, Susan Saint James and David Warner, resulted from miscalculation on the part of the producers, a titanic misjudgment in itself.

Originally budgeted at $2.5 million, a hefty expenditure to begin with, S.O.S. Titanic got out of hand after EMI (the English production company) and producer Roger Gimbel contracted with ABC-TV to deliver the movie.

As Gimbel explains it, "We had counted on finding a ship we could use to represent the Titanic. After the contract for $2.5 million was made we discovered that none of the great ships of that period exist anymore.

"So we had to construct sections of the ship at Shepperton Studios in London on an enormous indoor tank. We built part of one side of the ship 75 feet high and a 35-foot deck section with pistons and compressors to make it tilt 30 to 45 degrees.

"On top of that we had to flood the deck and drop three-ton lifeboats over the side, filled with extras. The biggest cranes in Europe, used out of camera range, were employed to lower the boats."

The sets alone cost $3 million, not counting plastic icebergs which were scrapped, forcing the company to shoot the real thing near Greenland where shots of the rescue of the 703 passengers, mostly women and children, were done. Other scenes were made aboard the Queen Mary in Long Beach, Calif.

The company rented the Manxman, a ship based in Liverpool, to double as the Carpathia, the vessel which picked up the surviving passengers.

"When we realized discrepancies in cost were so great there was no way to recover our investment, there was nothing to do except release the movie in theatres in every country except the United States and Canada," Gimbel said.

"In order to do that we had to spend more money to give the project the big, expensive look of a feature film.

"You can't cut corners showing a ship sinking on its maiden voyage with more than 2,000 people being cast into the sea. We ended up with 74 shooting days and 125 speaking roles.

"There's no doubt S.O.S. Titanic can compete as a theatrical movie. The rest of the world doesn't care if it has been seen on TV in the U.S. It will be out there competing with Alien and other top-flight movies abroad."

Some fleas in the ointment

By AUDREY JOHNSON

In a program note for A Flea in Her Ear, Bastion director Ron Ulrich quotes Richard Pronko on playwright Georges Feydeau:

"His personal genius which ultimately drove him to madness, allowed him to create the complex dramatic structures which seem to whirl at such speed that they too threaten to fall over the brink into the abyss of lunacy."

Clearly Ulrich has taken the words to heart. He has indeed established a whirlwind tempo and kept his actors dancing on tiptoe throughout the three acts.

The manic doings of the various husbands and wives, lovers and lackeys, must, like the rotating bucket of water, never be allowed to slow down lest the contents spill out and are lost.

This tempo is both the triumph and the weakness of what is on the whole, an effective production that gives the new Bastion season a good send-off.

The cast handles the exhausting pace well except that frequently lips and tongue are simply not agile enough to get the words out intelligibly. A lot of double entendres and hilarious lines of other sorts fail to connect with audience ears as a result.

It takes a complete virtuoso ensemble to bring it off to an optimum degree and that we do not have in this production.

Two fabulously rococo sets by Michael Egan provide a visual opulence that has not been equalled at the McPherson Playhouse since Robert Cothran designed sets for Victoria Fair in the late '60s. Costuming also, echoing the set designs in color range and flourish, is a distinct asset.

The farce style with its arch asides to the audience is not precisely delineated nor sustained at the same level by all members of the cast.

It is exemplified best by Wenna Shaw as Raymonde, the wife whose suspicions of her husband's infidelity launch the whole ridiculous circus. Her entire performance has the clarity and finesse demanded of a Feydeau heroine.

Robin Marshall in the double role of her husband and Poche, the hotel porter, a confusion that gives rise to most of the comedy of the second and third acts, is definitely much better in the latter characterization than as Monsieur Chandebise.

Ed Stephenson revels in the plum role of Camille, whose speech impediment infuriates everyone but the audience.

It's definitely one of his best performances so far. Robin Ward and David Brown are thoroughly effective and among the most intelligible of the cast. Alison MacLeod's Lucienne is quite delightfully hysterical and Lorie Charters and Jane Logie establish the French connection as well as being — particularly in Charters' case — provocatively sexy.

Garrison Chrisjohn makes good use of his opportunity in a small role. Stuart Nemtin, on the other hand, as the flamboyant Carlos Homenides de Histangua, the husband with murder in his heart and pistols in his hands, lacks focus. The intensity is there but it spills all over the stage as the words spill in a blur from his lips.

It's a lot of fun but not as much as it should be. One is not reduced to wiping the tears of laughter away and that has happened in other professional productions of A Flea In Her Ear.

No. 6 on TV for Bacall

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Lauren Bacall can count her television dramatic appearances on five fingers. No. 6 comes Oct. 12 in a two-hour segment of NBC's The Rockford Files.

Her first was in the early 1950s when she did a live version of The Petrified Forest with Humphrey Bogart, her husband for 12 years until his death in 1957, and Henry Fonda.

A few years later Noel Coward asked her to join him in Blithe Spirit. She says, "Noel said, 'It's a comedy, darling, we must have an audience.' We had an audience of celebrities and it was panic in the streets."

In the early 1960s, she did her first and only episodic television until now, despite numerous offers for her own series. She played a role on Dr. Kildare. She says, "It was really a time when I was having a hard time getting work. That was forgettable. Walter Matthau and I also did some terrible play in New York."

And, of course, she brought her Tony-award winning performance in Applause to television a few years ago.

Miss Bacall is in the commissary at Universal Studios, where she is finishing up work on The Rockford Files. At 55 she still has "the look" to make heads turn. Her voice is smoky and she remains as outspoken as ever.

She is talking about the happy experience of working with James Garner on the show. Yet, she is also seething with outrage at Bogie, a CBS movie about her late husband. Kevin O'Connor plays Humphrey Bogart and Kathryn Harrold is Lauren Bacall.

"I'm furious about it," she says. "Mr. Fries says it's in the public domain, but I'm not dead and I'm not in the public domain. I've seen the script and the dialogue between Bogie and me is totally made up. It's terrible if you don't have any control over your own life. It's bad enough that Bogie's dead and has no control. But I'm alive and I have no control."

Seattle is cool to Ross Dam plan

B.C. has offered a new plan for settling a decade-old dispute over the raising of Ross Dam, but Seattle officials won't discuss it.

The province has opposed raising the Seattle City Light dam on the upper Skagit River because it would flood some 4,800 acres of recreation land in B.C.

City officials are said to be dissatisfied with the latest plan, which would compensate Seattle for electricity that would be lost if the dam is not raised. It reportedly would charge Seattle the province's standard industrial rate for power, with an escalator clause for future price increases.

One Seattle city hall source said Tuesday the latest plan would cost Seattle more for electricity than if the dam were raised.

Meanwhile, Seattle has sent B.C. its own plan, specifying how much power is needed by the city to make up for generating capacity to be lost if the dam is not raised.

If the dam stays as it is, Seattle would lose a potential 46 megawatts of average power and as much as 292 megawatts of peak power. The city's current average electrica load is slightly under 900 megawatts.

In a statement last month, Environment Minister Rafe Mair linked a Ross Dam settlement to a controversial proposal to divert water from the Kootenay River, reducing power generating capacity by the Libby Dam in the U.S. That proposal is viewed as a major bargaining chip for the province in the dispute.

Seattle has received a federal license to raise the dam and once negotiated a settlement with the province calling for $34,000 annual compensation for the flooding of the upper Skagit Valley. The settlement has since been denounced by B.C.

Year in England for city student

A year's study at University of East Anglia has been granted English literature student Andre Gerard, 26, of 1471 Fort, by Rotary International.

A graduate of the University of Washington, Gerard (right) was sponsored by the Rotary Club of Victoria as one of 1,000 young men and women around the world to benefit by more than $12.8 million in educational grants.

At present, Victoria student Bruce Sampson is in England as the club's 1979-80 scholar while University of London graduate Stephanie Thompson of Swindon, Eng., is at the University of Victoria.

120 Edinburgh awards given

Duke of Edinburgh awards for achievement were presented during the weekend by Lt.-Gov. Henry Bell-Irving to 120 young people from Vancouver Island, the Lower Mainland and the B.C. interior.

Victorians formed the largest group of award winners at the Saturday afternoon reception at Government House.

It inluded 16 students from Shoreline secondary school who won the bronze award, partly for participation in the school's outdoor education program which involves walking the West Coast Trail.

Ten boys from Brentwood College also won awards and there were two from Spencer junior secondary school in Langford. Another eight went to students at Dean Heights junior secondary.

Big coal deals completed

SEOUL (AP) — Premier Bill Bennett of British Columbia witnessed today the signing of major coal-sales contracts between three suppliers from B.C. and Korea Electric Co.

Under the three separate contracts, Kaiser Resources Ltd., Fording Coal Ltd., and Crows Nest Ltd. will supply the state-run utility with a combined 800,000 tons of coal anually for five years beginning 1982.

The signing of the contracts at the South Korean energy and resources ministry was timed with the visit of a seven-member economic mission from B.C., led by Bennett.

Korea Electric said that the 800,000 tons of Canadian coal will meet about 30 per cent of 2.7 million tons needed annually for a projected 560,000-kilowatt power plant south of Seoul. The remaining 70 per cent is to come from Australia.

Bennett and his mission, who arrived Tuesday, called on South Korean Premier Choi Kyu-Hah, Foreign Minister Park Tong-Jin and Energy and Resources Minister Chang Yie-Joon.

Licence lets Alcan 'rampage country'

KITIMAT (CP) — The British Columbia water rights branch is setting out to determine the limits of a 1949 water licence, given to Aluminum Co. of Canada, which some environmentalists call "basically a Magna Carta which allows Alcan to rampage over the countryside at will.

"What we want to know is how much control do we have over Alcan because this water licence is extremely vague," said branch official David Tanner.

Alcan's proposed Kemano Two hydro-electric expansion, under the licence, would almost double the existing capacity of Kemano One, a power plant built 25 years ago, 65 kilometres southeast of this northern community, to fuel the Alcan smelter.

The Alcan licence was issued under the Industrial Development Act, legislation written solely for Alcan "back in the post-war years when the government thought it had to hand over sweeping powers as the price it had to pay for development," said Howard DeBeck, water rights controller.

"It's the only hydro-electric development in the province which wouldn't have to apply for a water licence," he said.

Sockeye catches above forecasts

VANCOUVER (CP) — Sockeye salmon catches in waters regulated by the International Pacific Salmon Fisheries Commission were substantially above the one million forecast for commercial fishermen from Canada and the United States.

The season ended Sunday when the commission relinquished control of the Fraser River fishery for the year.

The commission said preliminary estimates gave U.S. fishermen a total of 1,775,000 fish, compared with 1,592,000 caught by Canadians.

Canadian fishermen took 4,129,000 pink salmon, compared with 4,075,000 caught by Americans.

Parole board boss named

The director of regional corrections in the South Fraser region, John Konrad, has been appointed $48,000-a-year chairman of the B.C. Parole Board.

Attorney-General Gardom said Tuesday the jurisdiction of the board will be extended to include prison inmates serving definite sentences in B.C. prisons but not inmates serving life sentences, those whose death sentences have been commuted to life imprisonment or prisoners serving indeterminate sentences.

High-salaried executive $2,500 cheat

VANCOUVER (CP) — An executive who earns $50,000 a year was found guilty in provincial court Tuesday of two counts of fraud involving less than $2,500.

Robert John Newton, 43, of Delta was charged with defrauding the Pacific Centre Merchants' Association of $1,500 between April 29 and June 2, 1979, by claiming he donated $3,000 to the Variety Club when he gave only half that amount.

Newton, former retail manager of the Pacific Centre mall, also pleaded guilty to defrauding the association of $965.12 by submitting false expense claims.

Newton now is the retail manager of the Harbor Centre Mall.

He was fined $1,000 or 30 days in jail in default and put on probation for a year.

Newton, also former executive director of the merchants' association, said his problem stemmed from a business he started in Toronto which went bankrupt.

He said his financial situation was so bad he was forced to sell his North Vancouver home.

Newton said most of his creditors now are satisfied and he expects to have his affairs cleaned up in a year.

Wrong rooms risk rumors

OTTAWA (CP) — A red-faced John Munro hastily emerged from a Progressive Conservative caucus meeting today vehemently denying he had abandoned the Liberals for the Tories.

"Now don't let this start any rumors," Munro told reporters, apparently referring to reports of opposition MPs planning to defect to the governing party.

Conservative MPs held their meeting in a room where Liberals used to gather when they formed the government. Munro (Hamilton East) had just temporarily forgotten that he was no longer in the governing party.

A few minutes later, an embarrassed-looking Stan Korchinski (PC—Mackenzie) hurried down a hallway, saying he had walked into the room where Liberals were meeting.

MD tells court why he advised abortion

He said the coroner's hearing should be deferred until a determination is made by the crown on whether criminal charges are going to be laid against any of the doctors.

He said there had been discussions that charges ranging from murder to procuring an abortion would be laid against two of the doctors whom he did not name.

He said the crown has had ample time to decide and said it is unjustified from an equitable and moral standpoint to keep the doctors under a cloud. He wanted some guarantee charges would not be laid.

Thackray also said he is disturbed by the presence of Anderson acting as counsel for the coroner because Anderson has been intimately involved in the criminal investigation.

"If he is going to lead evidence then he can't but unconsciously lead evidence that may help him to determine if he can substantiate charges," he said.

Anderson, however, said that while the crown does not have enough evidence at this stage to lay charges, he could not give an undertaking that charges would not be pursued if new information comes to light.

McArthur then adjourned the hearing to the afternoon to give Anderson an opportunity to discuss the matter further with his superiors.

When the inquest resumed, Anderson said it would be irresponsible for the crown to give any kind of undertaking. He noted that a section of the coroner's act entitles him to attend inquests and lead evidence on behalf of the coroner.

Anderson said that while the death occurred 14 months ago, the case didn't become a matter of public knowledge until mid-May.

McArthur said he wrote to crown counsel on July 5 requesting the inquest. Crown counsel Nick Lang replied on July 20 saying that no criminal charges were contemplated at that point but added if further evidence is elucidated at the inquest the crown may then be obligated to pursue charges.

Four witnesses were called during the afternoon session — Cyril MacAulay, cremator at Royal Oak Burial Park, Leonard Hole, senior research officer with the department of vital statistics, Dr. Garth Walther, director of pathology at Victoria General Hospital, and Mrs. Margaret Grieve, grandmother of the deceased infant.

MacAulay testified he had cremated the remains of the infant on the afternoon of Sept. 20 on orders from appropriate officials.

Hole tendered documents showing that the baby was born at 4:52 p.m. Sept. 18 at VGH with Rippington the attending physician. The death notice showed the baby died at 2:55 p.m. the next day after having lived 10 hours and three minutes.

He noted the grandmother, Mrs. Grieve, signed all the forms.

He said the death certificate cited hyalin membrane disease — prematurity as the cause of death.

An autopsy was carried out but the physician neglected to put in his report with the certificate.

Hole said he requested the report which was accordingly sent on Oct. 10. The physician Chan noted the cause of death based on the autopsy was premature labor. He added the mother is severely mentally retarded and had a hysterectomy.

"Was there anything unusual about that?" Anderson asked.

Replied Hole: "The unusual circumstance is in regards to the infant's survival."

Hole said that from a statistical standpoint the death caused a problem. Originally the cause had been hyaline membrane disease, a respiratory condition, but on the strength of the autopsy report, the cause was later changed to prematurity, termination of pregnancy.

The death was thus an unnatural one and should have been reported to the coroner within 24 hours, but was not.

Hole said W.D. Burroughs, vital stats director, notified the attorney-general and the coroner of the anomaly on May 4.

Hole said that while it was unusual the coroner wasn't notified, it is not an uncommon occurrence, nor is it uncommon for the vital stats to query death reports for more information.

He said about 30 per cent of the 1,800 death reports filed with the department each month have to be returned to physicians for more information, but only a handful each month involve neglect to notify coroners.

Walther testified he performed an autopsy on the baby on Sept. 20 and determined cause of death as hyaline membrane disease. He said the baby was approxinately 23 weeks into its gestation.

He said the disease is common among immature or premature infants, particularly those born by caesarian section as the infant Grieve was.

He said that while there was evidence of immature lung development, there were no signs of any congenital abnormality that might contribute to the death.

Under questioning from Anderson, Walther said caesarian sections are normally done anywhere from the 33rd to 40th week of pregnancy. He said the longer the operation is postponed the better the chances of survival.

An infant born in its 23rd week would have less than a 15 or 10 per cent chance of surviving, he said.

There was some confusion over Chan's report that a hysterectomy had beem performed on the mother. A hysterectomy involves removal of the uterus.

Thackray noted the doctor had made a mistake and should have used the word hysterotomy which is another way of saying caeasarean section, or cutting into the womb to remove a fetus.

Thackray said doctors performed a tubal ligation on the mother which rendered her sterile.

Mrs. Grieve told the jury the mother of her grandchild was her youngest daughter of five children.

She said her daughter was "different" from the very beginning and had been in homes for the severely mentally retarded since the age of seven, first at Woodlands and then Glendale.

She said neither she nor her daughter were aware of her pregnancy.

"There were no outward signs, except perhaps her eyes. She had a look or glow in them over the past year. It may have just been a fancy I had."

Mrs. Grieve said when Martin broke the news to her she was stunned.

"I couldn't believe it could happen. For 32 years she had always been protected."

She said she pressed for an operation as soon as possible.

"I just didn't want her to have it. She didn't know what happened to her, poor kid. She couldn't tell us anything about it."

Raising the zoning category could boost former museum's value to over $1 million

Saanich got buy in Maltwood deal

By AB KENT

Saanich will be getting a real estate bargain when it closes the deal to buy the former Maltwood Art Museum at Royal Oak from the University of Victoria.

The municipality and university have agreed to a purchase price of $375,000 for the 30-year-old replica of a Tudor hall house and 7.7 acres of land willed to UVic with the Maltwood collection of fine art in 1964.

According to a university administrative source the price is slightly below the appraised value for the parcel about three years ago, which was then $385,000. But he also said today's value on the open market might be more like $500,000.

It is estimated commercial property in Royal Oak could sell anywhere from $3 to about $7 a square foot, based on current real estate appraisal, and that could boost the value of the Maltwood estate over $1 million.

The Thatch, as the novel building is known, was built in 1939 as a restaurant but for years was the home of John and Katharine Maltwood, who filled it with fine art objects from around the world. It lies in a key location between Patricia Bay Highway and West Saanich Road, on the doorstep of urban Victoria.

Its contents, including some notable sculptures by Katharine Maltwood, are now housed in the recently completed Maltwood Art Museum at University Centre.

Critics are suggesting the university is abandoning the terms of the Maltwood legacy, and that Saanich, by not paying the full value of the property is in a position to profit by the resale of the land. If the land must be sold the Maltwood art collection should be the full beneficiary, without Saanich taking advantage, some think.

When the property was appraised it was zoned as civic institutional land, a designation that Saanich council intends to alter to C2 commercial. When that is done, and the university, for its part removes any restrictive covenants from the title, the deal will be closed for $375,000, said Mayor Mel Couvelier.

By raising the zoning category Saanich will be increasing the value of the property, the undeveloped parts of which will probably be sold. But the Tudor hall itself will remain intact in some role, Couvelier said.

"It will be declared a heritage structure because of its uniqueness," he said.

Because it has to be utilized it will have to fill some commercial purpose, he felt, perhaps once again as the restaurant it was originally designed to be, or a neighborhood pub.

"We don't have one in Saanich and it would seem suited to that," he said.

When the transaction is completed, Couvelier said the municipality will advertise for proposals for use of the 14th century style English hall.

The mayor said the C2 zoning would allow for the widest possible use of the site, but it is not intended to make that a permanent category. Only when the end use is decided will the appropriate zoning be adopted.

He also said he feels the undeveloped parcel adjoining the house should be sold to cover some of the cost of acquisition, perhaps for housing.

"The best thing I've seen so far is some kind of senior citizens housing accommodation."

Public proposals will be sought for this land, too, he said.

Trevor Matthews, UVic dean of administration, said Saanich wants to buy the property only with clear title and the university had agreed to remove any impediments. As far as UVic is concerned, he said, the principal obligation was to the art collection and that had been met with the new museum on campus.

By the terms of bequest the Maltwood home was to be maintained, used and operated by the university for the viewing and study of art. But the will provided for the sale of adjoining land for the benefit of the museum.

A court ruling relieved the university from maintaining the house, provided the proceeds went into the Maltwood trust.

While it was housed in the Thatch, the collection was subject to destructive moisture and temperature and paintings, tapestries and carpets had begun to deteriorate. A shake roof replacing the original straw thatch failed to solve the problem. Some works had to be sent to Japan for repairs and restoration.

A permanent place where the works of art may be properly cared for in controlled conditions has been achieved.

"We weren't able to before and now we are doing an excellent job," Matthews said.

It is intended that the proceeds of the sale of property will be added to the original $200,000 Maltwood trust for the perpetual care of the collection, including a curator.

UVic has been caring for the art for 15 years using income from the trust. With the additional money it may become possible to augment the collection, Matthews said.

Meanwhile, in its new home, the Maltwood collection is getting better exposure than it had in the Thatch. In the past year, with the proximity of University Centre auditorium, it has been seen by more people than visited the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria.

Okay, all you gluttons who, as I did, gorged yourselves on far too much Thanksgiving Day turkey and trimmings. You put on a few more pounds and got even further out of shape, didn't you?

Well, I have just the antidote for you. It's the Crystal Fitness Assessment Program.

First, you go to the Crystal Pool and put your name down for their new fitness test. You'll then do the test privately and receive from the examiner a full and confidential report on your condition plus a personal exercise prescription. In other words, a list of the things you should do to put yourself into shape.

I can afford to be reasonably smug about all this as I took the test the other day (before the turkey) and did very well. In fact, in the section of the test labelled Stature (all your vital statistics including weight and percentage of body fat) my percentile score was 97, which means that only three per cent of Canadian males my age are in better condition.

In Stamina, too, I scored highly after marching up and down stairs while plugged in to an electrocardiograph for three three-minute sessions at increasing speeds. I got a percentile of 96 in that one and examiner Denis Smith, who runs the Crystal's Fitness Program, was quite ecstatic, calling my stamina "excellent" and stature "ideal."

"Your existing diet and activity pattern are doing very well for you and you should maintain both at their present level," he advised.

Since my activity pattern consists mainly of regularly chasing three rapidly growing children around, it would probably be quite difficult right now not to maintain it.

However I must confess that while I did rate an 81 score in Suppleness (tests of bending in various directions like a tree in the wind), I didn't do too well in the fourth S of fitness — Strength.

I've never been much of a power handshaker and my performance with the dynamometer used to measure grip strength was below average with a mere 42 percentile score.

Situps and pushups were other embarrassments. I could perform just 24 situps in 60 seconds for a percentile score of 45 (only to arrive home and find my 10-year-old can do 35 in the same time!) and, coming at the tail end of everything, I could manage only 13 pushups no matter how much time they gave me. And the percentile score for those was a measly 35.

Oh well, I did do well in the stamina class and was comforted by Smith's words that stamina was the most important fitness component.

The test, which takes just over an hour and costs $15, is a lot of fun.

Of course, whether you act on the examiner's advide or just recoil in horror when confronted with the results of your test is up to you. There is an exercise prescription given, though, and you can follow this for three months and then undergo the test again (this time for $10) to see if you're in any better shape.

Although it's something new, quite a few have already taken the test which, like the popular Employee Fitness Program, is helping to turn the revamped Crystal Pool into far more of a people place.

Once criticized as a cold (both the water and atmosphere) and impersonal kind of place and called Victoria's white elephant, the Crystal underwent changes a year ago that saw the addition of a whirlpool, saunas and an exercise gym.

But the biggest changes were probably in the attitude of the staff toward fitness and toward people.

Denis, who is 29 and going for his master of arts degree in physical education at UVic, was employed as fitness program co-ordinator. Down came the ugly turnstyles at the main door and people were made to feel more welcome.

"Manager Bill Young has done a great job," Denis said as we chatted over coffee after my test. "A lot of his initiative has gone into getting this whole fitness thing going. He realized fitness was happening and that we should be a part of it."

And a little while later, I left the Crystal feeling quite good in the knowledge that most of me was up to scratch. But I tell you, after all that walking up and down the steps to the throb of music while gazing out at the trees in Central Park, it took me some time before I could stop saying "Up, two, three; down, two, three" while navigating the stairs back at work!

STRIPPED CLEANLY of its weatherbridge hardtop, windows, radio mast and lights, 28-foot cruiser struck by Queen of Sidney on Saturday is surveyed by Les Cole at Capital City Yacht Club. Owner Brien Baker and wife were in the cockpit when ferry loomed through fog in Active Pass and caught them from astern, trapping superstructure under the ship's main deck overhang. Baker was unhurt when top was swept over his head, but his wife was cut trying to avoid being pitched overboard.

Acupuncturist held high hand in treating gambling addict

By ROGER STONEBANKS

A Victoria medical doctor and acupuncturist told county court Tuesday he has had a success rate of more than 90 per cent in treating almost 2,000 persons with addictions and compulsions during the last two years.

Dr. Molino Yam said he doesn't know of acupuncture being used elsewhere in this fashion and that the treatment appeared to be exclusively his.

He was testifying during sentencing proceedings of Walter James Larocque, 35, a compulsive gambler since childhood who pleaded guilty to breaking and entering with intent to commit an indictable offence at a Fisgard Street apartment on May 18 and to theft of $370, which was recovered, from the Chinese Village Restaurant Oct. 20, 1978.

Yam, who is licensed by the B.C. College of Physicians and Surgeons to practise acupuncture in addition to his general medical practice, said he has used acupuncture to treat people with compulsive behavior such as drug addiction, alcoholism and gambling.

He said Larocque came to him in June and he gave him five treatments and another treatment this month. He had responsed exceptionally well.

It was not clear scientifically why acupuncture cures compulsion, he said.

But the body produces a morphine-type substance which is used in times of stress. In stressful conditions, the body needs more of this substance and acupuncture stimulates regeneration of the substance so that a compulsive person is able to cope with stress instead of substituing something like cigarettes, drugs, alcohol, gambling or nail biting.

Defence counsel Chris Considine said Larocque works full-time, has a family and has just bought a house. Both offences arose from the need to raise money for gambling.

He said Larocque's rehabilitation should be uppermost in the court's mind and the success rate with acupuncture should be taken into consideration.

Judge Montague Drake said it was clear the interests of society were best served if he continued the rehabilitation he had largely brought about himself.

The compulsion to gamble was the cause of the present offences and that appeared to be well on the way to being taken care of, he said.

Larocque, who has numerous convictions for similar offences, was given 60 days in jail, to be served on weekends "so you can keep your job," plus one year's probation with the condition that he continue acupuncture treatment.

Sun stays in the strike zone

The weather has thrown us a curve, which is good news for Victoria and bad news for Ontario.

The present airflow over Victoria is from the southwest, bringing a California-type weather pattern to this area.

But as the winds move across the Prairies, they are curving and by the time they reach Ontario the flow is from the cold north.

The result Tuesday was record high temperatures here and record low temperatures — and snow — in Toronto and Ottawa.

The present pattern should continue for the rest of the week.

On Tuesday Victoria's temperature hit 21.5 Celsius, breaking the former Oct. 9 record of 20.6.

Q. Is the recent $130,616 B.C. Supreme Court 'jury award in Victoria to a Duncan father of two whose wife was killed in a traffic accident the first of its kind? J.B.

A. No. But it is believed to be the highest award in this kind of case in Canada. Most of the award, $109,346 for the husband-father, was for "loss of benefits, services and advantages" because she was a full-time mother and housewife.

Mother files complaint

The mother of a 15-year-old girl held in a city police cell after receiving a skull fracture in a bicycle spill just before her arrest has lodged an official complaint.

Chief Jack Gregory said today he received the complaint last week and will attempt to resolve the problems informally.

He said a meeting will be held with the mother and officers and jail staff concerned but could not give a date because one of the arresting officers is on holidays until Oct. 25.

Meanwhile, the Times has learned human resources officials have also submitted complaints, one from the girl's social worker and another from the office of the regional manager for the Victoria area.

It is also understood the ministry is seeking legal representation for the girl in the event an inquiry or civil action arises out of the incident.

The girl's mother said in an interview today she is unhappy with the way police have handled her complaint.

She said when she went to the station last week officers "just gave me the run-around ... they wouldn't give any straight answers."

She said she was denied access to the booking book to see what statements were recorded at the time her daughter was brought in to jail.

Under the Police Act, a complainant may try to resolve a problem informally with the chief or officers. The case may be taken to the police board and a public inquiry requested.

Rain delay won't alter team lineups

BALTIMORE (AP) — The 1979 World Series still was tied 0-0 today because not even baseball's annual fall classic can fool around with Mother Nature.

It rained on the scheduled Tuesday night opener of the best-of-seven game confrontation between Baltimore Orioles and Pittsburgh Pirates.

It marked the first time in the 76-year history of the Series that the opener was postponed.

Baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn called off the game at 8:32 p.m., just two minutes after the scheduled starting time. The decision was booed by the fans, but justified by the continuing downpour and dire weather forecast.

There was no way the American League champion Orioles and National League winning Pirates could have played on the sopping wet natural grass and dirt surface. Although a tarpaulin covered the infield, the outfield was full of puddles.

The forecast for tonight was for clear skies.

As a result the Orioles and Pirates will forego their travel day Thursday.

The Series opens tonight and continues Thursday night. Third game will be in Pittsburgh Friday night. The fourth game is scheduled for Pittsburgh Saturday afternoon.

Managers Earl Weaver of the Orioles and Chuck Tanner of the Pirates, said the rainout would not affect their lineups for the delayed opener.

Weaver said Mike Flanagan, whose 23 victories led the majors during the regular season, still would open for the Orioles. Weaver also held to his plan to use Mark Belanger at shortstop for more defensive strength.

Weaver went so far as to name his starting pitchers for the next three games — Jim Palmer, Scott McGregor and Dennis Martinez. Tanner had disclosed he would use Bert Blyleven and John Candelaria in the next two games.

Tanner said that if Flanagan was the Orioles' starter tonight, he would stick with Bill Robinson in leftfield and rookie Steve Nicosia behind the plate. Both swing from the right side and hopefully would make the Pirates more effective against the left-handed Flanagan.

Weaver and Orioles' fans still were concerned about how the non-use of the American League designated hitter rule in the Series would affect Baltimore.

Weaver expects it to make a difference since he will have to let his pitchers bat instead of Lee May, the club's designated hitter who hit 19 home runs and had 69 RBI.

Flanagan hasn't batted since he was in the minor leagues three years ago. Kison had eight hits and drove in six runs, including four with a grand slam during the regular season.

Flanagan was 23-9 with a 2.65 ERA in the regular American League season and is one of the leading candidates for the Cy Young Award as his league's top pitcher.

Kison was 13-7, with a 3.14 ERA, including a 4-0 mark during the Pirates' September drive to the NL East title. He did not pitch in Pittsburgh's three-game sweep in the league championship series against Cincinnati.

The game will be televised over Channels 2, 3, 4, and 6 starting at 5:30 p.m. PDT.

Blues shock Canucks; Unger signs for Flames

Times News Services

St. Louis Blues didn't miss Garry Unger at all Tuesday night as they used superior skating to create scoring chances and easily defeat Vancouver Canucks 5-2 at Vancouver's Pacific Coliseum in the opening game of the 1979-80 National Hockey League season.

Unger missed his first start after playing in 833 consecutive games, the all-time NHL record, after playing out his option and shopping his services. But he will be able to resume the string tonight as he signed with Atlanta Flames early this morning.

A spokesman for the Flames in Atlanta confirmed that Unger and Flames general manager Cliff Fletcher had reached an agreement at a hotel near Montreal early today and that the veteran centre would be in an Atlanta uniform tonight when the team opens its NHL season in Quebec City.

The youthful Blues got a good effort from goaltender Ed Staniowski and their penalty-killers as they took period leads of 2-0 and 3-1 in their impressive win over the disorganized Canucks.

"It was a good effort by everyone, but especially by the goaltender and the penalty-killers," said coach Barclay Plager of the Blues. "We're a skating team and we created two of our goals by skating and being in good position in their end."

St. Louis got goals from rookie Bob Crawford, Blake Dunlop, Wayne Babych, Brian Sutter and Hartland Monahan as the Blues took advantage of the few good scoring opportunities they got. Monahan's goal was into an empty net.

The Canucks had nine power plays against the aggressive Blues, but many times didn't even get a shot on goal as they tended to overpass instead of taking the obvious shots. On other occasions, Staniowski was able to smother the puck in close when Vancouver shooters failed to get their shots up high.

Vancouver goal scorers were defenceman Lars Lindgrem and opportunistic winger Ron Sedlbauer as the Canucks outshot St. Louis 25-22 after a horrid first period.

Staniowski made two brilliant saves against centre Thomas Gradin, one of the few bright spots in the Vancouver lineup.

The Canucks played without captain Don Lever, who was sitting out a one-game suspension imposed by the league after being detected as the first player off the bench Oct. 6 in Colorado during a brawl.

Vancouver also lost defenceman John Hughes after the first period when he reinjured his ankle while blocking a shot. Hughes also was involved in two of the four fights during the game.

Unger, a 32-year-old Edmonton native, played out the option year of his contract with St. Louis Blues last year and became a free agent June 1. Since the deal was completed before the Flames opened their 1979-80 campaign, Unger's NHL record of 883 consecutive games will be extended tonight at Quebec City.

The Flames gave up veteran defenceman Ed Kea, centre Red Laurence and a second-round pick in the 1981 amateur draft as compensation.

Unger had eight consecutive 30-goal seasons behind him, third behind Bobby Hull (13) and Phil Esposito (12). In 12 NHL campaigns between Toronto Maple Leafs, Detroit Red Wings and St. Louis, he scored 377 goals — 17th in career totals — and collected 352 assists.

With the high-powered Flames, who were surprising preliminary round victims of Toronto in the 1978-79 playoffs, Unger is the 10th forward to score 20 or more goals last year.

Multiplex isn't for those who live near the PNE

Multiplex, whatever and wherever? Those are the questions of the moment. Vancouver's Stadium of the future is literally on the line.

And it was on the line, the hot line, on the weekend, as a casual Thanksgiving day tourist noticed. Stadium trouble shooter Paul Mannning was the guest on an afternoon talk show and, if you don't think this is a hot issue in Vancouver, think again.

The Vancouver folk, and all of B.C. for that matter, have been asked for input on the stadium and some of them heard.

Manning was told more than once where he could put the Stadium, and one place, more than once, where he couldn't put it.

The trouble spot if you're a Multiplex man is that very area where Empire Stadium is located right now . . . the Pacific National Exhibition grounds.

Multiplex briefly is the Erwin Swangard plan for a super stadium on the PNE grounds, tied in with the PNE, which would house football, soccer, et al, but no baseball, and would have many other amenities that go with an exhibition facility.

But the residents of that area want no part of it. They are having trouble enough with traffic, are highly organized, have launched their attack well, and have been getting swift action on their complaints.

No parking signs on side streets, except for residents, have been the in-thing in the immediate area adjoining the PNE grounds for some time. Now there is a no-access campaign in full swing. Residents, east of Cassiar, the main north-south highway adjoining their homes on one side and the PNE grounds on the other, have had access to those side roads barricaded off to traffic coming from the North Shore.

The spinoff, by design or otherwise, as obviously all the talk of Multiplex has had its effect, is that people leaving the PNE grounds also cannot take the short way home. The residents simply don't want cars whizzing up their streets from Cassiar during the day or football fans, soccer fans or anybody from the PNE grounds roaring up those streets late at night.

One of these, the Cambridge Street overpass, was near a main exit from the PNE. This was one of the better escape routes from the Stadium. Until yesterday, it had been barricaded, making it a treacherous manouevre trying to get on Cassiar. But the provincial government recognized this and ordered it re-opened.

These are basically the same people who don't want Multiplex for the same reasons. They don't want their traffic problem compounded. And on the air they were ready to quote survey after survey on traffic, population, the whole bit, and that will be part of their official submission.

Coquitlam and Burnaby got some votes for a stadium, because those municipalities have land, lots of land. But the downtown group seemed to get the most marks, simply because that plan was simpler and the area closer to the action. Whether it's feasible or not is what Manning hopes to answer.

Basically, the down-towners have been pressing for an all-purpose stadium in the False Creek area without the frills of Multiplex. The idea is that a downtown site would better serve the big city syndrome. A downtown visitor, or worker, for example, would have time for socializing, dinner, a ball game and perhaps some night life without driving to Coquitlam and back.

The regular or occasional fan appeared to be divided between downtown and Burnaby, with Burnaby getting the nod over Coquitlam for an out-of-town stadium because of its more central location. The downtowners pointed to Seattle's Kingdome as their example in point.

It was also the majority opinion that baseball should be a part of a stadium.

But what is big brother prepared to do to help?

A good point, because any stadium will have to have the backing of the provincial government and also the feds. Sure, the provincial government is interested. It has to be. It must approve anything and Premier Bill Bennett probably did the right thing by appointing someone (Manning) to look into the whole affair and report back.

There has been talk about $25 million being available from B.C. for the project. If that's just a teaser, it's still more than the feds have promised.

When Iona Campagnola was the big wheel for the Liberals, she promised something like $35 million for a new PNE Stadium complex. But she has since disappeared and so has the $35 million. For when the present Fitness and Amateur Sport Minister Steve Paproski was asked what his contribution might be, he said none.

That could change. But those nearby the PNE won't.

RETURNING TO ACTION, Philip Delesalle of Victoria performs on pommel horse during Pacific gymnastics championship series Tuesday night at Edmonton. Out of competition since August, Delesalle won this event and finished evening in second place among male contestants. (CP laserphoto)

Americans in front despite chilly gym

EDMONTON (CP) — Kurt Thomas was tired and cold and the chill bothered Rhonda Schwandt's bad knees.

But both managed to stay warm enough to finish as the top individual performers Tuesday night and put the United States in a commanding position to make a clean sweep of the first Pacific gymnastics championships.

Tuesday night's competition, the fourth in a five-stop championship tour that began in Honolulu Oct. 1 and ends in Vancouver Thursday night, was held in the Edmonton Coliseum on an ice hockey rink covered with sheets of plywood.

"I'm not used to cold gyms," Thomas said, insisting he wasn't happy with anything he had done during the night even though he was the top male competitor.

The Florida native compiled a total of 57.20 points in six individual events — vault, floor exercises, pommel horse, rings, parallel bars and high bar — to wind up a shade ahead of Philip Delesalle of Victoria.

Delesalle, competing for the first time since August while he sorted out some "psychological problems," collected 56.65 points. He would have been even closer to Thomas but for what he described as a "dumb" mistake — he stepped out of bounds during the floor exercises and it cost him four-tenths of a point.

Japan took the team title for the night with 113.90 points to 113.75 for the U.S. and 110.55 for third-place Canada. The other Canadian men, Allan Reddon of Edmonton and Brad Peters of Brampton, Ont., finished 10th and 11th respectively.

In the over-all championship standings, Thomas was the top male competitor with 230.60 points, comfortably ahead of Toshiro Kanai of Japan 225.25.

It was a little closer in the over-all men's team standings, where the U.S. had 457.70 points, Japan 453.50, the People's Republic of China, competing internationally for the first time, 445.75 and Canada 439.80.

Schwandt said the cold resulted in stiff mats — "it's harder when you land" — and caused some discomfort in her knees. She had surgery on her right knee in February and has bruised ligaments in her left.

But Schwandt still managed to corral women's individual honors with 37.90 total points in four events — vault, uneven parallel bars, balance beam and floor exercises.

But the U.S. women's team had to settle for second place behind China on the night's competition. The Chinese girls, Zhao Xuegin, Chen Hung and Zhou Xinping, collected 75.75 points to 75.55 for the U.S. and 72.70 by the Canadian trio of Elfi Schlegel, Karen Goold and Bonnie Wittmeier.

Individually, Xueqin placed second with 37.85 points, Hung third with 37.65 and Xinping sixth with 37.25.

Suzy Kelluns and Christa Canary, Schwandt's U.S. team-mates, tied for fourth place with 37.35 points. Schlegel, from Toronto, was seventh with 36.30, Goold, from Mississauga, Ont., 10th and Wittmeier, from Winnipeg, 14th.

With one step left on the championship itinerary, the U.S. is ahead in the battle for women's team honors with 305.60 points, followed by China with 303.75, Canada with 287.15 and Japan with 285.55.

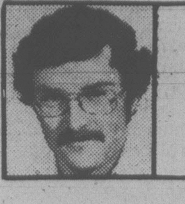
Energy from forest waste might prove expensive



OUTDOORS
Stewart Lang

It sounds like a sure answer to the energy crisis.

A recent study completed by Paul Jones and Associates of Vancouver for the Canadian Forestry Service concludes with the premise that "forest biomass on Vancouver Island appears to offer real prospects of meeting a major part of the Island's short term power needs."

"In fact, the forest industry itself has the opportunity of expanding its own power and process steam output using forest residues," the study adds.

Unfortunately, there is a proverbial fly in the ointment.

Perhaps it was outside the terms of reference for the study, but there appears no real reason for ignoring a basic part of an extremely complex situation.

Higher utilization of logging products does have several beneficial effects other than energy production. It can eliminate the need for slashburning to remedy fire hazards in some areas and can reduce insect populations.

On the other hand, closer utilization to produce energy from forest wastes can remove essential nutrients from the ecosystem.

The majority of nutrients in the aerial parts of a tree are concentrated in the bark, small stemwood, branches and foliage.

Removing most of these parts in conjunction with the main stemwood can produce local nutrient depletion.

In addition, closer utilization leads to a greater disturbance of the soil.

In the many mountainous regions of British Columbia, the soils are relatively young and slash left on the ground after logging is important in protecting and augmenting the organic soil until a new crop of trees can take over the function. This process can take in the order of 20 to 30 years.

During this period, unprotected organic soils can experience considerable erosion and oxidation losses which could have serious consequences for subsequent crops of trees.

On rich forest sites, this might not be a problem. But in poorer areas, such as most now being logged, close utilization may have to be accompanied by a longer rotation period before the next crop of trees is harvested.

Fertilization of forest sites, at first appearance, might provide a ready answer to the problem of nutrient loss.

But it just opens the door to a few more problems.

Fertilizing experiments show poor response on very rich and very poor sites with best results on intermediate sites and hardwoods generally respond better than conifers.

In addition, there is a pollution factor in large-scale nitrogen applications.

Biological fixation adds about 38 million tons of nitrogen to the earth's soils per year. This is balanced by an annual denitrification of approximately 40 million tons.

Industrial fixation is currently running about 40 million tons annually with 100 million tons predicted the by the 2000.

We just don't know how the global system will react to this additional influx of nutrients. But the problems now being encountered in Lake Erie and Okanagan Lake might provide a little insight into the future.

Another factor that should be considered is the importance of microbial equilibrium in forest soils. The addition of fertilizer could alter the balance in an undesirable way.

So, it seems, there are no easy answers.

But a far better look should be taken at possible consequences before actively considering utilization of logging "waste" as a supplimentary energy source.

Skiers who were titillated by John Barrymore's excellent presentation of Vagabond Skiers at the University Centre last Friday can look forward to more on-screen torment before strapping on the boards for a new season.

John Comparelli and James Menard of Vancouver have produced a 90-minute film called Different Slopes which makes its Vancouver Island appearance at 7:30 p.m. Oct. 25 at Victoria's MacPherson Playhouse and 8 p.m. Oct. 26 at Duncan's Cowichan Community Centre.

Rutledge second after first round

SAN DIEGO — Victoria's Jim Rutledge, who recently won the B.C. Open, finished in a four-way tie for second place during the opening round of the U.S. Professional Golfers Association qualifying tournament Tuesday at Torrey Pines north course.

Rutledge fired a four-under-par 68, including six birdies and two bogeys, over the 6,500-yard layout.

The 20-year-old from Uplands is one stroke behind leader Jeff Kern of San Diego and tied with Americans Don Levin, Mike Krantz and Bill Murchison.

Following today's round, the field of 144 will be cut to the top 70 and ties. Between 15 and 20 of the top finishers in the 72-hole test will be invited to the national qualifying school in Huntsville, Tex., later this month.

Is Coetzee a bionic man?

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — (AP) — John Tate's manager is demanding x-rays be taken of Gerrie Coetzee's left fist to determine whether the South African boxing champion is a bionic man.

Ace Miller took an interest in the legality of Coetzee's hand after he devastated Leon Spinks in 123 seconds of the first round in a recent fight at Monte Carlo.

"Spinks said the punch didn't seem normal," said Bob Arum, promoter of the Oct. 20 World Boxing Association title fight between Tate and Coetzee. "He felt like he was being hit by concrete."

"Ace is filing a protest. But to do that he has to have x-rays."

"As far as I'm concerned it's like science fiction, but Ace can do what he wants. After all, it was South African doctors who did the first heart transplant, so anything can happen here."

A Johannesburg orthopedic surgeon, who has not been identified, operated last year on Coetzee's injured hand, removing smashed joints and cartilage and fusing the bones.

"The fist was fixed in a hitting position, not the normal piano-playing position as would have been done with the average man in the street," the surgeon said Sunday.

To ensure the immobilization of the fist while it was setting in position, eight steel pins were drilled into it and removed later.

"What had originally been a relatively immobile hand had been converted into a rock," the doctor said. "And when Spinks was hit the first time he must have felt he had been hit by a rock."

The surgeon also was reported to have said that Coetzee could "punch a brick wall" with his repaired hand.

Should medical experts determine that Coetzee's hand is illegal, the fight at Loftus Versfeld Stadium in Pretoria could be in trouble.

"I want those x-rays to have my own doctors study them to see whether Gerrie has a normal fist or whether the operation he has undergone give him a decidedly unfair advantage," Miller said.

Scott 'unretires'

WOODBRIDGE, N.J. (AP) — James Scott, the Rahway state prisoner recently stripped of his No. 2 ranking in the light-heavyweight division by the World Boxing Association, said Tuesday he has "unretired" and will fight two scheduled bouts at the prison this year.

Scott said last week that he was retiring because the WBA wouldn't allow him to fight for the title while he was in prison.

"I won't fight so long as I'm in Rahway state prison," he said at the time.

But Tuesday, Scott said he decided to honor his contracts "regardless of the circumstances."

Scott is scheduuled to fight Jerry Celestine on Oct. 27 and Alvaro Yacqui Lopez on Dec. 1 at the prison.

Both fights will be televised in the U.S.

Scott said he is continuing to negotiate with correction officials to get permission to fight outside the medium-security institution.

Boyer ends Palace streak

LONDON (Reuter) — Southampton ended the unbeaten record of Crystal Palace with a 4-1 win in English League First Division soccer action Tuesday night.

The London club met Southampton striker Phil Boyer in great form and failed to regain the league leadership it surrendered to Manchester United last Saturday.

Boyer scored three goals for the second successive time in home matches to take his total for the season to 11, the highest in the top division.

Boyer also created the chance for Nick Holmes to score Southampton's fourth goal while Paul Hinshelwooz replied for Crystal Palace.

Bolton took a point off defending champion Liverpool in August and repeated the feat with a 1-1 home draw. Bolton scored first through Neil Whatmore, but Kenny Dalglish headed the equalizer with 10 minutes remaining.

Derby County held free-scoring Wolverhampton Wanderers to a scoreless draw and Arsenal beat Ipswich 2-1. Alan Sunderland and Graham Rix scored a goal each for the London side and Alan Brazil replied for Ipswich a minute from time.

Coventry suffered its fifth consecutive away defeat by losing 1-0 at Bristol City. Tom Ritchie was the scorer.

Bob Latchford, left out of the England squad for ne::t week's European championship tie against Northern Ireland, struck twice in Everton's 4-1 League Cup third-round replay triumph against Aston Villa.

Why leave when you can swim here?

By JIM CRERAR

Will Canada ever be able to keep its swimmers from splashing off to the sparkling waters of the United States?

Mark Fellner, UVic's new swim coach, isn't sure. He'll be happy simply to keep Vancouver Island youngsters from stroking across the Straits of Georgia to the Mainland.

"Why do Victoria and Vancouver Island kids have to feed the rest of B.C. when we have perfectly good facilities right here?" he asked.

Fellner, who also coaches Victoria Olympians (formerly Victoria Amateur Swim Club), is a relative newcomer to swimming. He's beginning his fourth season of coaching but never swam a stroke competitively.

"I was struggling to get through the swimming course in physical education (at UVic)," he related. "The Cranbrook swim coach, Al Heather, was just finishing off his internship at UVic and conscripted me. 'If you can't do it, teach it,' he said.

"He put me on the (pool) deck and gave me a couple of books and said, 'Here, learn.' "

Fellner did.

"Despite all the frustrations, I love it," he admitted.

After graduating, Fellner taught and coached a year at Fort St. John, then coached three years with Cranbrook Tritons, a leading age-class club.

This is UVic's first full season of competitive intercollegiate swimming. The first major meet of the year is scheduled at the McKinnon pool Oct. 27 when several universities and clubs from Canada and the northwest U.S. will vie in the Viking-Victoria Olympian Relays.

Most of Fellner's swimmers also compete for area clubs, a common practice among Canadian universities, and Fellner doesn't intend to steal swimmers for UVic or the Olympians.

"What we've got on the Island are different types of clubs," he explained. "Some are recreation oriented, some are community clubs and some are competitive oriented.

"All these clubs are producing age-group swimmers and at the top of the pyramid there would be a high-calibre program at UVic that would meet their competitive and academic needs. At the end of the academic year, they could go back to their swim clubs and complete their competitive seasons. In fact, I hope Allison Noble goes back and swims for Victoria Y in the summer."

"All of them could place in the top three in Canada in their specialties," Fellner said.

He's counting on them to make the finals at the Canadian Interuniversity Athletic Union championships March 6, 7 and 8 at Laval University in Quebec City.

Fellner's leading male swimmer this year is Doug Smith, a 400- and 1,500-metre freestyler coming off a two-year layoff after competing on Nova Scotia's Canada Games team in 1977.

UVic's competitive team consists of 18 swimmers, eight with previous racing backgrounds. Another 25 take part at the recreational level.

Canadian universities in past haven't provided the kind of competition needed to keep Canada's international medallists from accepting U.S. college scholarships. Fellner doesn't see this changing, at least right away.

"Swimming at the university level in Canada has been a joke," he agreed, but like many others he's watching developments at the University of Calgary.

Calgary interests have lured national and Olympic coach Derek Snelling away from Toronto's Etobicoke Swim Club to coach at the university and the Foothills club starting next year.

"He'll offer a national development program and a university program," Fellner said. "It's possible that top swimmers would no longer have to go south to schools like UCLA when they can get what they need at home."

Fellner expects Snelling will coach Canada's Olympic team at Moscow next summer.

"He has 19 candidates for the Olympic team. His charismatic effect will draw swimmers to the University of Calgary, no doubt about it."

Stubborn Alberta side extends B.C. in final

EDMONTON (CP) — Alberta gave up both height and weight advantages but stubbornly made it a close contest for two-thirds of the final match Monday before losing 27-6 to British Columbia in the Canadian Rugby Union's Western championship tournament.

British Columbia, playing with nine of the 25 members on Canada's national team, led 7-3 at the half and poured it on in the last 20 minutes. The team now heads to its sixth consecutive national championship game, in Ottawa on Oct. 20, against Ontario.

Alberta fullback John Mooney replied with two penalty goals.

"Our game plan was to counter everything they do," Alberta coach Rab Murray said later. "But their fullback, Taylor, makes something out of nothing. He takes the ball away from you all the time so it becomes a game of chase."

In the consolation game, Manitoba hung on to a 13-0 first-half lead for a 13-10 victory over Saskatchewan. In first-round action, Alberta blanked Manitoba 45-0 and B.C. outscored Saskatchewan 30-21.

Ontario captured the Eastern title Monday with a 7-4 victory over Quebec. New Brunswick downed Nova Scotia 18-6 in a clash for third place.

MARK WALKER
. . . narrow margin in 1978

Defending riding champion Mark Walker will be among the jockeys coming for the 16-day thoroughbred meeting of the Capital City Turf Club at Sandown Park, beginning next Wednesday, Oct. 17.

Although the list is not yet complete, a preliminary survey of the riders competing at Exhibition Park in Vancouver indicates that at least 14 will be coming to Sandown while others will decide on their immediate future later this week. There is also a possibility some prairie riders will compete here.

Walker won the riding championship last year by the narrow margin of two victories, 23-21, over Travis Wilkinson, who also will be returning.

Walker has enjoyed a fairly successful season at Ex Park and, at last official count, was sixth in the jockey standings and had the most winners of those coming here.

Up to Oct. 3, Walker had 61 winners, 56 seconds and 38 thirds from 446 mounts.

Smith and Wilkinson were ranked ninth and 10th, each with 33 winners. Brian Johnson was the runaway leader with 129.

Meanwhile, the Vancouver Island Thoroughbred Horse Society is sponsoring a Preview Day at Sandown on Sunday. Gates will open at 1 p.m. with the program getting under way at 1:30.

Admission will be free and refreshments will be available.

Activities include a parade of horses, at least two novelty races and a handicapping clinic.

The parade will feature several of the horses that will be running at Sandown. The novelty races are a surprise while the handicapping clinic will include a panel of experts.

Post parade next Wednesday and all week days (Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays) will be 1 p.m.

Post parade on Saturdays and the final holiday program, Nov. 12, will be 12:30 p.m.

The 108-day Exhibition Park season closes Saturday.

Thistles and Tyees head for showdown

If you only have time to watch one match this season in the Greater Victoria High School Boys' Soccer League, perhaps you should plan to take a look at the action this Friday.

That's when Victoria High Tyees and Mt. Douglas Thistles, both boasting 7-0 records after one-sided victories Tuesday, are scheduled to clash at Victoria High.

The two coaches — Jindy Johl of Victoria and Brian Cornell of Mt. Douglas — will decide today what time to play the match, either 11 a.m. or 4 p.m.

The two clubs last met in the playoff final last season with Tyees coming out on top by a narrow 2-1 margin.

In other matches, Oak Bay Bays nipped Belmont Braves 2-1, Reynolds Roadrunners edged Claremont Spartans 5-4 and Spectrum defeated Stelly's Stingers, 3-1.

Rob Wallace, Hugh Owen and Mark Crisp each scored twice for Mt. Doug while singles were added by Keith Smith, Colin Ayers and Scott Weinberg. Doug White and Dave Hughes shared the shutout.

Tyees were again led by the sharp shooting of Antonio Noguiera, who booted four goals. Dallas Moen and Paul Askew connected for two each and Albert Pascuzzi contributed one. Larry Hunt scored a goal for Esquimalt and Vic High counted another in their own goal.

Mark Wyatt and Peter Skillings counted for Oak Bay while Alex Fraser countered for Braves.

Kerry Layton (2), Greg Pynn, Neil Johnston and Russ Gurney scored for Roadrunners while Dan Hammick (2), Darren Bohnet and Colin Toakley replied for Spartans.

Spectrum's goals were scored by Derrick Gelaude, Glen Jay and Wes Falkner while Bob Nordstrom averted a shutout for Stingers.

MAASTRICHT, Netherlands (Reuter) — Los Angeles Aztecs of the North American Soccer League completed a five-match tour of the Netherlands by playing to a 3-3 tie Tuesday night with the MVV Maastricht of the Dutch First Division.

The Aztecs trailed 2-1 at halftime.

Braves trim Trios

With the triumph, the Braves boosted their record to 4-0.

Scott Connors came up with two goals for Saanich, which enjoyed period leads of 1-0 and 4-0, while singles were added by Jim Michaels, Brian Goodwin, Marty Irvine and Greg Bertrand.

Stars get sacked over team revolt

COLOGNE (Reuter) — The West German Hockey Federation (DHB) has sacked the captain and assistant captain of the women's national field hockey squad for a team revolt on the eve of the world championships at Vancouver in August.

DHB president Juerg Schaefer said captain Christl Behr and Margit Mueller, holder of a record 91 West German caps, have been fired from the national squad.

He accused the two women and the rest of the team of damaging the federation's reputation and of causing it financial loss because it had to hire a new coach.

The team members told the DHB just hours before leaving for the championships they would not travel with coach Werner Nowak. The federation supported Nowak, but he resigned because of the women's lack of confidence in him.

Opening lead — nine of diamonds.

Some problems that arise during the play can be solved with complete confidence in the outcome. But there are other times when you can't be sure just how you'll fare and the best you can do is follow the course of action that is more likely to be right than wrong. Here is such a case.

Let's assume you're East, defending against four hearts, and your partner leads the nine of diamonds. Declarer plays the king from dummy, but, if you're a careful player, you don't automatically take the king with the ace. Instead, you take time to survey the situation as a whole and, more particularly, your play at this point.

You shouldn't allow yourself to be stampeded into taking the ace and then start planning the defense — because you'd be doing the right thing, all right, but in the wrong order.

The first order of business is to try to judge the significance of the diamond lead. You know that West's nine is not a fourth-best lead, nor can it be the top card of a sequence, since you see the eight in your hand. Theoretically it could be the top of a worthless three-card suit, but it is far more likely to be a singleton or a doubleton.

If the nine ia a singleton, it is right to take the ace and return the suit for partner to ruff. But if the nine is a doubleton, the proper play is to duck, at the same time signaling with the eight to show the ace.

There is no good reason to assume that South has five diamonds rather than four; on the contrary, South is far more likely to have only four diamonds. You therefore should let dummy win trick one with the king. As a result, you sooner or later give partner a diamond ruff to put the contract down one.

John nodded. "You can say that again. A rectangle, same as before?"

"Exactly the same, but square tiles. We've narrowed the choice to two sizes, twenty-cemtimetre at 29 cents or thirty-centimetre at 69 cents," Stan replied. "Neither would require any cutting, but the smaller would cost us $5.25 less not counting tax."

Before the judge

Margaret Lillian Marsh, 2131 French, was charged in the July 12, 1978, death of Nigel Ambery during a home birth at 4177 Shelbourne.

Judge Harold Alder had committed the woman for higher court trial following a three-day preliminary hearing Feb. 5 to 8 on a charge of causing bodily harm to Elizabeth Ambery but dismissed the criminal negligence charge after Crown counsel Nicholas Lang conceded he had not proven the child had become a human being.

Defence lawyer Peter Leask of Vancouver, appearing before Judge Alder, elected trial by judge without jury and waived the preliminary hearing.

Lang said outside the courtroom the trial is expected to open this morning in county court here.

Three members of the Bounty Hunters motorcycle club elected trial by judge and jury on charges of unlawful confinement, assault causing bodily harm, and possession of a shotgun dangerous to the public.

Brock Douglas Flett, 32, of 840 Victoria, David Dean Krenbrink, 22, of 511 Macaulay, and Daniel David Purgaj, 20, of 965 Hillside, are jointly charged in connection with a Sept. 26 incident which allegedly started in Victoria and ended in Saanich.

Their preliminary hearing was set for March 13. Flett is represented by lawyer Peter Freeman, Krenbrink by Harold Turnham, and Purgaj said he expected to be represented by Brian MacKenzie.

David Allan Paulson, 30, was charged with causing bodily harm with intent to wound, maim or disfigure taxi driver Barry Smith by discharging a firearm, possession of a weapon dangerous to the public peace, and unlawfully pointing a firearm.

The charges were laid following a Friday night incident at an Esquimalt apartment which resulted in the Greater Victoria police Emergency Response Team being called out.

Paulson was remanded until Oct. 17 for election of his trial method.

Two men were jailed after pleading guilty to drinking-driving charges.

Joseph Neil McKinnon, 44, of 1221 Pearce Crescent, received a total of seven months in jail after pleading guilty to two counts each of impaired driving and refusing a breath test demand.

The first set of charges arose from an April 8 incident and the second from a May 19 incident.

McKinnon was convicted Oct. 14, 1975, in Parksville of impaired driving and fined $350; and on Sept. 13, 1977, in Victoria of driving with a blood-alcohol content over .08 and given 14 days.

Judge William Ostler handed McKinnon a three-month sentence on the first impaired driving charge and a concurrent seven days for refusing the breath test demand.

Minutes later, Judge Fred Green imposed a four-month, consecutive term for impaired driving and a 30-day, concurrent sentence for refusal to perform the breath test. Green also said he would recommend the Alouette River alcohol rehabilitation unit for McKinnon.

Michael Phillip Quiney, 18, of 540 Langholme Drive, was given a 14-day, intermittent sentence after pleading guilty to driving April 1 with a blood-alcohol content over .08.

It was the second related conviction this year for Quiney, who pleaded guilty to impaired driving Jan. 29 and was fined $400.

Fined for drinking-driving offences were: Laurie Tinkham, 18, of 2230 Phelps, $400; Andrew Thomas Clark, 41, $400; and John Hubert Hoban, 40, of 975 Sooke Lake, $100.

In addition, Hoban was ordered to perform 100 hours of community service work.

Students posted rapist warnings

The mystery about who put up the posters on the University of Victoria campus warning women about a rapist has been solved.

The action was initiated by students of a women's study 200 class, says Carol Milstream, one of the students.

She said she and four others made 35 posters after instructor Connie Rooke told them there had been four sexual assaults on the campus in recent weeks.

Police were puzzled by the appearance of the posters.

There had been suggestions the posters had been prepared by the Rape Relief Centre or a university creative writing class.

Bus runs studied for handicapped

A special demonstration project to provide regular bus service for handicapped residents who live in several buildings near Saanich municipal hall is being promoted by Mayor Mel Couvelier.

He said that last week the pilot project cleared the first hurdle — approval by the Urban Transit Authority board of directors. Pending council approval, detailed negotiations can start between UTA staff and Saanich. Approval of the Capital Regional District will also be required.

Couvelier said the custom bus service is intended to serve the Battin-Fielding housing project, Nigel House, the Garth Homer Achievement Centre and Annavets housing — all located close to Saanich municipal hall between Seymour and Vernon avenues.

The Lions operate a transportation service for the handicapped, but riders must reserve space four weeks ahead.

Saanich may have to contribute towards the cost of the program, but Couvelier will try to get financing from the CRD because the buses would serve the entire region.

Dear Abby

Three weeks ago I got laid off. Since then I've been all over town looking for work, but haven't had any luck.

I see a sign in the window saying 'Waitress Wanted,' so I go inside and the receptionist takes one look at me and says, 'Sorry, the job is already filled.'

I know why I get turned down without even an interview. I'm fat!

Abby, can't people be a little kinder and just give me a chance?

Just because a woman is fat doesn't mean she can't work. In fact, a fat person would probably work twice as hard just to prove she can do the job.

Fat and Depressed

Dear Fat:

Friends do more than listen. They tell you what you need to hear.

Feeling sorry for yourself won't land you a job. And don't expect some kind-hearted soul to put you on his payroll out of charity.

Face it, most fat women are not as attractive as their slim sisters. (And they're not as healthy, either.) They may seem to be 'jollier,' but they're only trying harder to be accepted because they feel inferior.

So, do yourself a favor and quit asking for 'kindness' from others. See your doctor about a diet.

Dear Abby:

I've heard of guys who go around telling people they are bachelors when in truth they are married. But what do you think of a guy who tells people he's married when he's a bachelor?

Curious

Dear Curious:

I think he probably wants all the benefits of marriage with none of the responsibilities.

Dear Abby:

My problem is my daughter. (I'll call her Pam.) Pam is 15 and a women's libber already. She thinks it's every girl's right to do as she pleases as long as she's not hurting anybody and it's not against the law. This includes going braless, which is what she does.

Pam is a big girl. I mean top-heavy. If she wore a bra it would probably be a 38. Her teacher rang me up and told me that if Pam keeps coming to school without a bra, she'll be expelled.

Please help me.

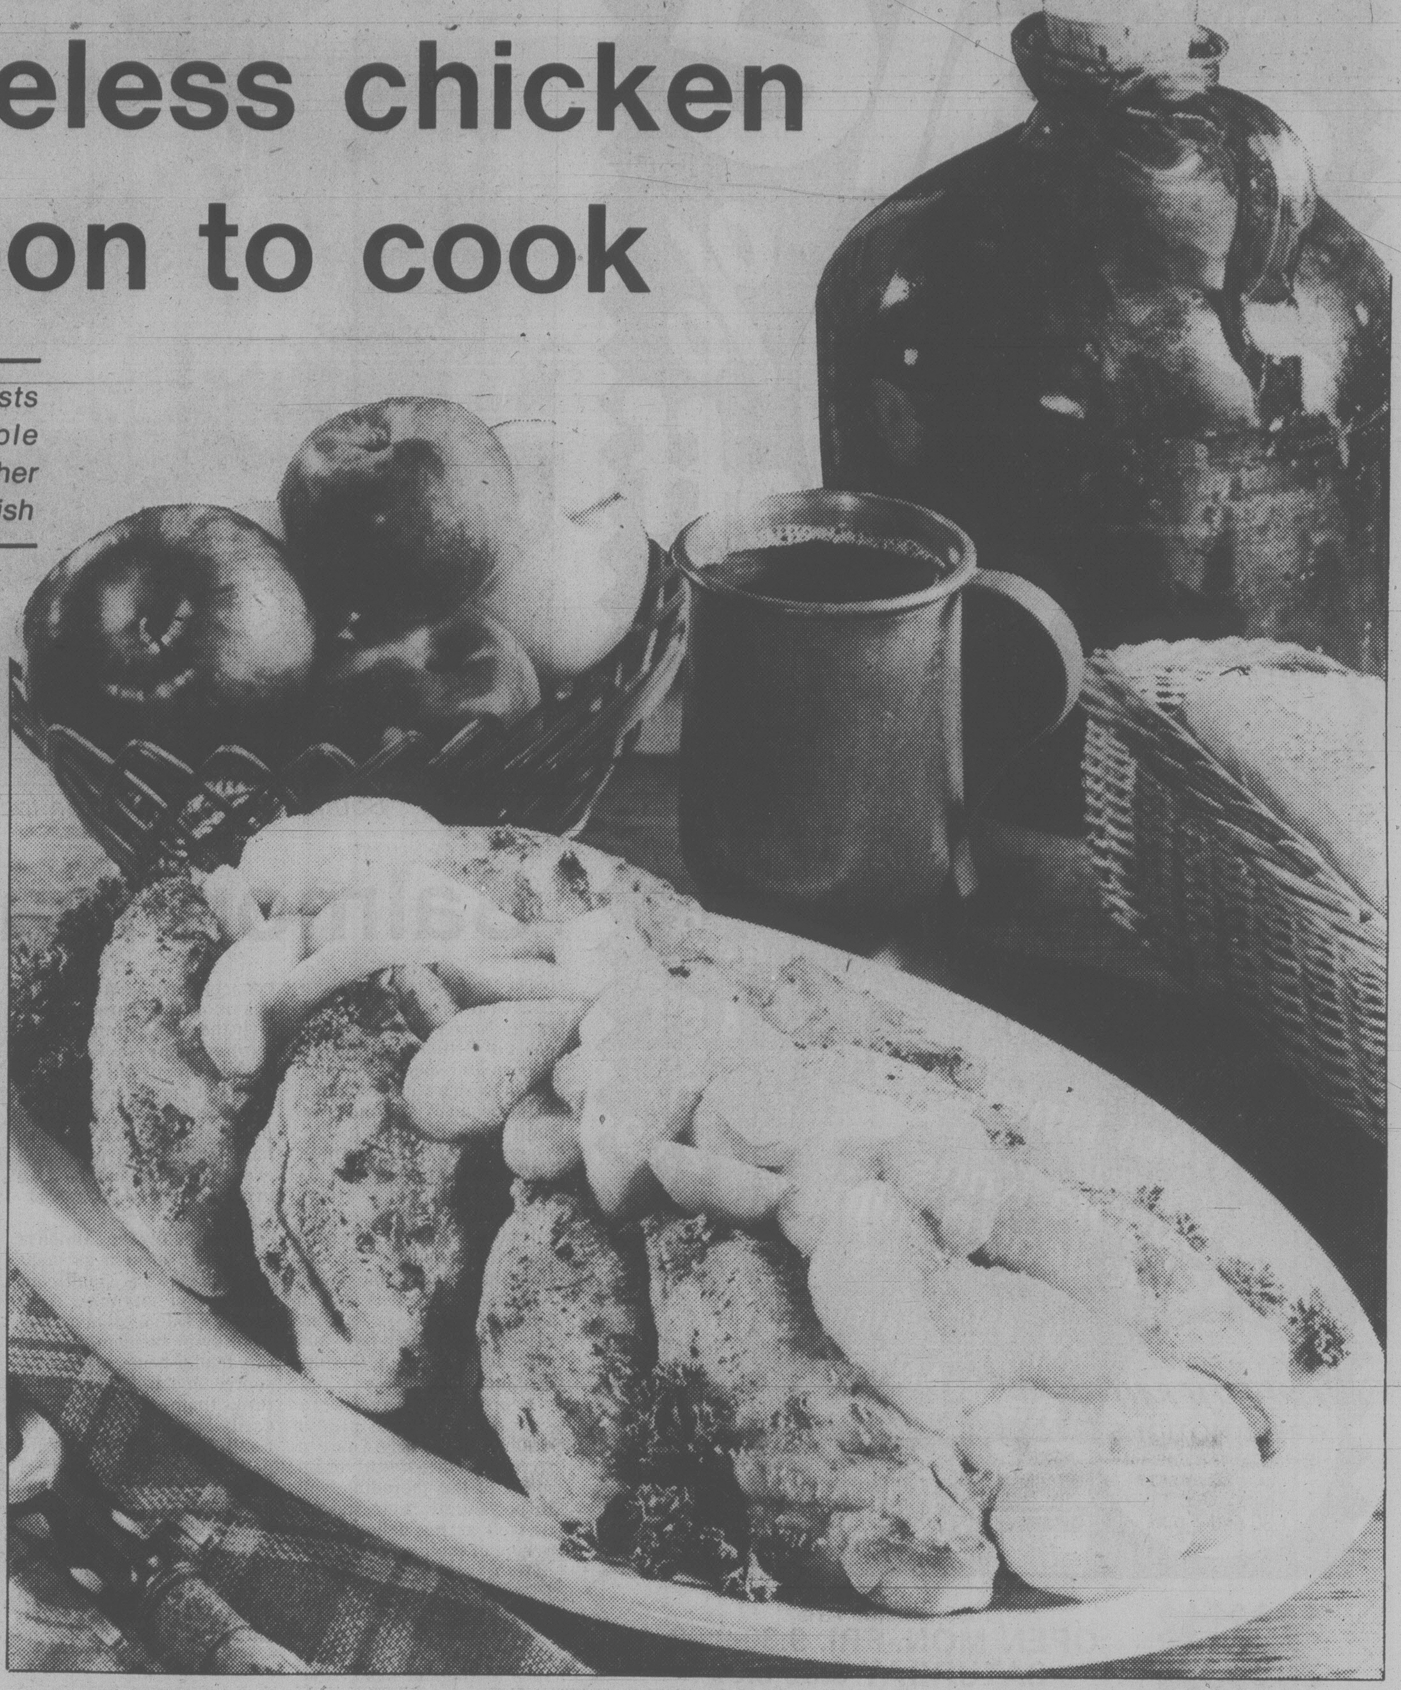
Pam's Mom

Dear Mom:

Does Pam's school have a dress code? If it does, and a bra is required, Pam is out of bounds in more ways than one. If there is no dress code, Pam's teacher is guilty of making threats she can't enforce, and she is out of bounds. Call the principal and get the facts.

Boneless chicken boon to cook

Boneless breasts broiled in apple juice are another tasty chicken dish



NEW YORK — One of the quiet but important advances of the present-day kitchen is the availability of ready-boned chicken breasts in the supermarkets. Twenty years ago it was necessary to ask your butcher to perform this task and some butchers would respond with a bit of irritability and hesitation. (In Greater Victoria this irritability and hesitation is offset somewhat by a 20 cent per pound addition to the cost of chicken breasts — which sell from $1.60 to $1.80 per pound.)

Boneless chicken breasts are, of course, a great boon to any cook with two hands on a saucepan and one eye on the clock. The cooking must be done quickly to avoid a dry, unpalatable taste.

Although chicken has its own admirable and delicate flavor, it is the perfect foil for foods that are more pronounced in flavor. And because it takes so well to such a multitude of other ingredients, chicken is one of the most versatile of meats. It is complemented by foods as subtle as mushrooms or herbs as assertive as rosemary or oregano. Sweet peppers offer an excellent contrast, and that is the combination in the recipe printed here. The dish's other principal ingredients are garlic, a bit of dry white wine and parsley. The total cooking time is less than half an hour.

To hasten this meal, which includes sauteed potatoes with mushrooms, it is best if you get all the ingredients ready for the skillet before you start cooking. As the chicken cooks, proceed to the final preparation of the potatoes and mushrooms.

Incidentally, if you can't find boned chicken breasts in your supermarket, or if your butcher is uncooperative, boning a breast is probably the easiest form of "butchering" in the world. It is something that a novice cook can do with a little practice and a paring knife.

CHICKEN BREASTS WITH PEPPERS

2 whole chicken breasts, about 2 pounds.

Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste.

3 tablespoons butter.

into thin strips, about 2 cups.

1 tablespoon finely chopped parsley.

1. You may purchase the chicken pieces already boned but with skin left on or you may do it yourself. If you choose to bone the chicken breasts yourself, split the breasts in half to produce four pieces. Leave the skin intact but, using the fingers and a paring or boning knife, cut between the flesh and bones to separate the flesh from the bones. The bones may be used for stock or discarded.
2. Sprinkle the chicken with salt and pepper.
3. Heat two tablespoons of butter in a skillet and add the chicken pieces, skin side down. Cook about four minutes or until golden brown on one side. Turn the pieces and continue cooking about four minutes.
4. Add the garlic and green pepper strips. Cook about four minutes. Add the wine. Cover and cook about four minutes longer.

Pierre Franey
the 60-minute gourmet

5. Remove the chicken pieces to a warm serving dish.
6. Add the remaining tablespoon of butter to the peppers in the skillet and stir until hot. Pour the peppers and sauce over the chicken. Sprinkle with parsley and serve.

Yield: 4 servings.

SAUTEED POTATOES WITH MUSHROOMS

3 medium-size potatoes, about 1½ pounds.

½ cup peanut, vegetable or corn oil.

¼ pound mushrooms, thinly sliced, about 1 cup.

2 tablespoons butter.

2 tablespoons finely chopped shallots.

1 tablespoon finely chopped parsley.

Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste.

1. Peel the potatoes and cut them into quarter-inch thick slices. Stack the slices and cut them into quarter-inch thick strips as for french fries. There should be about five cups.
2. Put the potatoes in a colander and run piping hot water out of the tap over them. Drain well.
3. Heat the oil in a skillet and add the potatoes. Cook over high heat, stirring and shaking the skillet to cook the strips evenly. Cook about 10 to 12 minutes, until strips are golden brown. Add mushrooms and cook, shaking and stirring, about four minutes.
4. Drain the potatoes and mushrooms. Wipe out the skillet.
5. Add the butter to the skillet and when it is hot, add the potatoes and mushrooms. Sprinkle with shallots and garlic, salt and pepper to taste. Sprinkle with parsley and serve.

Yield: 4 servings.

APPLE CHICKEN

8 chicken breasts
2 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons oil
3 tablespoons minced scallions
1 can frozen apple juice concentrate
1/2 cup chicken stock
3 Golden Delicious apples, peeled, sliced and cored
1/4 cup butter
1/2 cup heavy cream

Heat tablespoons butter and oil in skillet. Rub chicken with salt and pepper and cook in skillet over moderate heat until pieces are evenly browned. Remove chicken from pan, saute scallions until transparent.

Add apple juice and broth. Bring to boil, reduce heat and add browned chicken. Cover and simmer 20 to 30 minutes.

In another skillet, add remaining 1/4 cup butter and heat over moderate heat. Add peeled, cored and sliced apples, saute gently, turning occasionally. Cook slowly for 20 minutes.

When chicken is done, put on platter, skim fat from pan juices and reduce the juices over high heat for 5 minutes. Add heavy cream, stir vigorously. Boil rapidly for 3 minutes or until thick.

Reduce heat to low, return chicken to pan and simmer, basting with sauce.

Cholesterol and triglycerides are well-established causes for narrowing of arteries. The condition, known as atherosclerosis, is due to calcium plaques that are deposited on the walls of the arteries that lead to the heart and to the brain.

A fascinating study has been released that indicates the possibility of keeping arteries free of these obstructing plaques. Dr. M. Rene Malinow and his colleagues at the Oregon Regional Primate Center, have found that experimental monkeys, when fed on a high cholesterol and fat diet, developed the plaques so common in humans.

Yet, when these animals were fed alfalfa meal in addition to their diet, the plaques did not occur as readily. In fact, it was found that even if plaques had already developed, alfalfa meal tended to reduce the size of these life-threatening lesions in the arteries.

Dr. Malinow speculates that the alfalfa may attach itself to the cholesterol and prevent its absorption into the bloodstream.

Hormone studies of women are said to yield a special urine test that may be of value in the early detection of breast cancers.

Dr. Jack Fishman and his co-workers, at the Montefiore Hospital in New York and at the Creighton University in Omaha, have found that women with a family history of cancer excrete the hormone, estrone, in the urine about the time of ovulation. Ovulation is the time of the month when the ovaries produce their eggs.

This interesting finding has led the research team to further investigate the real relationship between this hormone and the development of breast cancer.

This is a new avenue of approach. It may have long-reaching possibilities for the earliest recognition of cancer of the breast. Perhaps, even before such tumors become evident, doctors and their patients may be on guard. For early detection is the basis for early treatment. And this accounts for the remarkable success that now occurs in this massive problem.

The problem of collecting and storing blood for transfusions has always been a complex affair. Most of the difficulty arises with the inadequate supply of blood donors. After years of research, a synthetic blood has been created and used successfully in Japan. An emulsion of fluoro-carbons was created by Dr. Ryoichi Naito, in Osaka. This experimental substance is being thoroughly studied as a possible replacement when real blood is not available.

Salmon loaf only after work

The Pacific salmon is a fish with a fascinating life cycle. Native to the Pacific coast of British Columbia, it is born and spends its early life in fresh water, travelling to the ocean to feed and grow until maturity. Two to five years later, the salmon begins its trip back to its home stream, travelling thousands of miles against currents to its original spawning grounds. The salmon shows incredible power and endurance. It is able to leap heights of six feet in efforts to conquer falls and obstructions during this upstream migration.

Bruised and travel-worn salmon reach the placid waters of their origin only to spawn and die. It is in recognition of this incredible will to perpetuate their species as well as the delicate flavoring of their meat that we call the salmon the King of Fish. Truly a well-earned title.

The salmon family includes a large number of fish such as the steelhead, trout and char as well as five types we more familiarly think of as salmon - sockeye, pink, coho, chum or keta and chinook or spring. These are the five that are commercially canned. The sockeye because of its bright coral-red colour, high oil content and delectable flavor is the gourmet's delight. The others have pink flesh, are more economical and can be used in a variety of ways in cooking.

Nutritionally the salmon is as high in protein as meat and eggs. It has significant amounts of vitamins, A, B and D; iodine, niacin and riboflavin. Incidentally, the tiny tender bones are a good source of calcium so don't throw them out. (They crush easily and combine with the fish.) The fats in salmon are polyunsaturated. A perfect diet food, the salmon yields only about 100 calories in a ½ cup serving.

Here are a pair of the great salmon loaves. They are generous and serve six so end up being quite economical. Remember, there is no waste with canned salmon.

SOUTH SEA ISLAND SALMON LOAF
(Makes 6 servings)

1 1 can (10-ounce) chicken-rice soup
½ cup quick-cooking rice
2 cans (7¾ ounce each) salmon
2 eggs, beaten
2 tablespoons lemon juice or lime juice
¼ teaspoon grated lemon rind
2 teaspoons finely chopped parsley
2 tablespoons fine dry read crumbs
1 small onion, chopped
¼ teaspoon garlic powder
Salt and pepper to taste
1 can (14 ounce) pineapple tidbits
Sweet-sour Sauce (recipe follows)

Line the bottom of an oiled 8½x4½ inch loaf pan with a strip of foil. In a small saucepan bring undiluted soup to a boil and add rice. Stir well and cover. Bring to the boil again nd remove from heat. Let stand 5 minutes. Uncover and cool. Meanwhile, mash salmon, including bones and juice. Stir beaten eggs, lemon juice, rind, and parsley into mashed salmon. Stir cooled soup-rice mixture into salmon mixture. Add bread crumbs, onion and garlic powder. Season to taste. Drain pineapple, reserving juice. Spread half the pineapple in prepared pan. Scrape salmon mixture over pineapple, spreading evenly. Oven-poach in a shallow pan of hot water at 350°F for 50 minutes or until set. Cool slightly and loosen edges. Invert on a warm platter and remove foil. Garnish with shredded coconut and mandarin orange sections if desired. Serve immediately with Sweet-Sour Sauce.

Sweet-Sour Sauce

2 tablespoons sugar
2 tablespoons vingar
¼ teaspoon ground ginger
Reserved pineapple juice
Remaining pineapple pieces
1 tablespoon soy sauce
Salt and pepper to taste

FROSTED SALMON LOAF
(Makes 5-6 servings)

2 cans (7¾ ounce each) salmon
½ cup plain yogurt
2 eggs, beaten
1 cup stale, soft bread crumbs
¼ teaspoon grated lemon rind
2 teaspoons grated onion
2 tablespoons chopped parsley
½ to 1 teaspoon curry powder (optional)
1 tomato, diced and drained
Salt and pepper to taste
1½ cups fluffy mashed potato
2 or 3 tablespoons toasted sesame seeds (optional)

Line the bottom of an oiled 8½x4½ inch loaf pan with a strip of foil. Mash salmon, including bones and juice. Mix next eight ingredients into mashed salmon and season to taste with salt and pepper. Scrape mixture into prepared pan, spreading evenly. Oven-poach in a shallow pan of hot water at 350°F for 45-55 minutes or until set. Cool slightly and loosen edges. Invert on an oven-proof serving platter. Remove foil. Frost with mashed potato and sprinkle with sesame seeds. Return to oven and bake at 375°F until potato frosting is golden. Chili sans fuss

By MIKE McGRADY

If cooking can be called a science, it is an inexact science. Some people would have it otherwise — a quarter-of-a-teaspoon of this and an eighth-of-a-teaspoon of that — but these are the same kind of people who enjoy balancing checkbooks. Of all the dishes we're going to make together, this is one of the least exact.

A few years ago, a national magazine had the temerity to publish "the world's best chili recipe." Sheer nonsense. There is no one best chili recipe; there are dozens, hundreds. Fortunately, however, we will be serving this one in the company of the world's best coleslaw recipe.

The Staples: Make sure these are on hand: vegetable oil, fresh garlic, chili powder, celery salt, cumin seeds, caraway seeds, oregano, cayenne pepper, salt, eggs, flour, sugar, mustard and cider vinegar.

The Shopping List: One pound of dry kidney beans; two pounds of chuck steak, not counting the bone; four medium-sized onions; one large can of Italian plum tomatoes; one head of fresh cabbage; one small sour cream (or yogurt); beer; crackers; fruit in season.

The Night Before: Soak the beans overnight in cool water. There are some people who would tell you that you can get away with opening a can of pre-cooked beans, but don't listen to them.

Early in the Day: Bring the beans to a low boil and then cut the heat back, allowing them to simmer until tender, about three to four hours. One way to test for tenderness is to blow on a bean and see if the skin breaks. (Caution! Since this looks at least midly ridiculous, don't let anyone see you doing this.)

Also Early in the Day: As the beans are simmering you can make the cooked dressing for the world's best coleslaw. This is a little tricky. If you bomb out, try it a second time. If you bomb out a second time, you may want to consider mayo with a splash of vinegar.

Melt a quarter-of-a-stick of butter in a saucepan over low heat. (Danger! Very low heat, or else the eggs will scramble.) Add two beaten eggs, a large spoon of sugar, daub of mustard and a half-cup of cider vinegar. Keep stirring gently over low heat. In 10 minutes or so it will thicken all at once and you will remove it from the heat. (Danger! If you don't remove it at once, you may want to feed it to the dog while it is still warm.) Add a small container of sour cream (or yogurt) and put dressing in the refrigerator to cool.

3:30 P.M. Now, while the salad dressing is cooling, turn your attention to the chili itself. Chili sauce, like spaghetti sauce, lends itself to experimentation.

Begin by cutting the chuck steak into chunks and dusting the chunks with flour. (The easiest way to do this is to put both meat and flour in a brown paper bag and shake.) Cook the meat in a small amount of oil over medium heat until it turns brown. Chop up the onions and mince the cloves of garlic; add this to the meat and cook for five or 10 minutes — just until the onions start to turn brown at the edges. Stir in half the tomatoes. Then the spices — a pinch of celery salt, a large pinch of cumin seeds, another of oregano, a healthy dose of salt and cayenne pepper, and then the chili powder is itself. Try two tablespoonfuls. Taste. Oh, add another one. (Caution! It is always easy to add chili powder, not so easy to subtract it.) Simmer the sauce over low heat until the meat is tender, at least two hours.

5:30 P.M. Now add about half the pre-cooked kidney beans. And taste. At this point you can add more beans, more tomatoes or more chili powder — let your tase be your guide.

Grate or chop the cabbage, Add the dressing along with a small handful of caraway seeds. You have just made the world's best coleslaw.

There is nothing to do after this except serve the chili hot and the slaw cold, accompanied by enough beer to give your palate an occasional rinse. Why beer? Because wine with chili is about as appetizing as wine with pretzels.

There are several world's greatest recipes for chili con carne

Green cooked rice

- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1/4 teaspoon pepper
- 2 cups boiling chicken broth.

Saute onions and pepper in oil until soft but not brown. Place rice in a 2-quart baking dish. Add sauteed vegetables, parsley, seasonings, and broth. Stir. Cover with tight-fitting lid or heavy-duty foil. Bake at 350° for 25 minutes or until rice is tender and liquid absorbed. Toss lightly with a fork before serving.

Makes 6 servings.

- 3/4 cup thinly sliced green onions with tops
- 1/2 cup finely chopped green pepper
- 2 tablespoons vegetable oil
- 1 cup uncooked rice
- 1/4 cup snipped parsley

Hawaiian sunburn by eating

CHICAGO (UPI) — The Hawaiian seafood delicacy mahimahi may make you red in the face — but not from pulling a faux pas at the dinner table.

Dr. Robert Kim of the Straub Clinic in Honolulu said people can suffer from a type of fish poisoning after eating the dish.

Its most common symptom is a flushing of the face which gives the sufferer the appearance of having an acute sunburn, Kim reported. Other symptoms may include upset stomach, headache, nausea and general discomfort.

The condition, Kim said in the Journal of the American Medical Association, is caused by a toxin formed when darkmeat fish, including tuna, mackerel and mahimahi, is not refrigerated properly.

Symptoms will subside after about a day without treatment, but can be quickly treated with antihistamines.

Kim said 45 people reportedly came down with the condition in the first six months of 1978 in Hawaii. He said most cases were traced to frozen mahimahi imported from Taiwan.

question & answer

Q. I have a batch of snail shells that have been used, and I am not happy with the way they were cleaned. I simply washed them in soapy water and drained. Is there a better way?

A. Perhaps. I find that the shells come out neatly if you soak them in a kettle of water to which a little ammonia has been added. I then drain them well and put them back in a kettle with fresh water. This is brought to the boil and simmered for 10 minutes or longer. When drained, the shells — my shells, at any rate — are as clean as a whistle.

Q. At a recent benefit, several of the recipes used called for an abundance of garlic. It took us two hours to peel and chop them. Is there a simple technique for peeling and chopping garlic?

A. Yes. When possible, select heads of garlic that have large cloves bunched together. Break off several cloves of garlic at a time and place them on a flat surface. Use a flat meat mallet, the side of a heavy butcher knife or even the bottom of a small, heavy, clean skillet.

Tap each clove of garlic so that the skin is lightly cracked. Peel all the garlic cloves. Add the cloves to the container of a food processor or electric blender (preferably a food processor) and process to the desired degree of fineness. You may also add a little oil to the garlic as it is processed. Chopped garlic in oil will keep well if tightly sealed and refrigerated.

Q. I recently dined with friends who served a hot dish called imperial crab. Have you a recipe for this?

A. Imperial crab, or crab imperial, is one of the classic American creations. Generally, it is made by blending crab meat with mayonnaise that is then packed into crab shells and baked. Some cooks prepare it by combining crab meat and a white sauce.

Here is one preferred version:

CRAB IMPERIAL

2 cups crab meat, preferably lump crab meat
1 cup mayonnaise
1 tablespoon imported mustard such as Dijon or Dusseldorf
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
Tabasco sauce to taste
2 tablespoons chopped canned, drained pimento
¼ cup finely chopped green pepper
Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste
¼ cup fine, fresh bread crumbs
2 tablespoons melted butter.

1. Preheat the oven to 350 degrees.

2. Pick over the crab meat to remove all trace of shell and cartilege. Put the crab meat in a mixing bowl.

3. Blend the mayonnaise with the mustard, Worcestershire sauce, Tabasco sauce, pimento and green pepper. Add salt and pepper to taste. Blend this with the crab, handling the meat gently so as to not break up the lumps.

4. Stuff the mixture into four to six crab shells and mound each serving with a spoon. Sprinkle with bread crumbs and butter.

5. Arrange the stuffed shells on a baking sheet. Bake 15 to 20 minutes. In Maryland, this is served, more often than not, with creamy cold slaw, a salad of sliced tomatoes on lettuce and french fried potatoes.

Yield: 4 to 6 servings.

Q. Sometimes, when foods (soups for example) can be served either hot or cold, I find a basic change in flavors as the food undergoes a cooling and chilling process. Sometimes it is not possible to alter the seasonings after the food has cooled. Do you have any recommendations?

A. Frankly, I can scarcely imagine a specific dish in which the seasonings could not be altered to suit your own palate.

Soda fountain treat made at home

Rice Pudding with Banana Split Topping — what a wonderful combination of old-fashioned flavors. This recipe is just as the title says, a creamy yummy rice pudding with a chocolate whipped topping to which bananas, maraschino cherries, and nuts have been added.

Easier to serve on a warm day than ice cream, rice pudding can be prepared in advance and served chilled or warm. The topping also can be made ahead. It's perfect for buffets, barbecues, and family dinners. It won't melt, wilt, or collaplse — just the perfecr recipe for so many occasions.

In fat, rice pudding is so easy to make, you'll wonder why you haven't made it more often. It's just equal amounts of rice and milk simmered together until creamy and thick. All it needs is a bit of sweetening and a touch of vanilla. And if you are watching calories, you can add less sugar and still have a tasty and nutritious dessert.

RICE PUDDING WITH BANANA SPLIT TOPPING

4 cups cooked rice
4 cups milk
½ cup sugar
¼ teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon butter or margarine
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
Topping*

Combine alll ingredients except vanilla and topping in a 3-quart saucepan. Cook over medium heat, stirring occasionally, until thick and creamy (about 20 to 25 minutes). Stir in vanilla. Spoon into serving dishes. Serve warm or cold with topping. Garnish with a maraschino cherry, if desired. Makes 8 servings.

*Topping

¼ cup sugar
2 tablespoons cocoa
¼ teaspoon salt
1 envelope (1-½ oz.) whipped topping mix
1 cup chopped walnuts
1 cup makshed bananas
¼ cup sliced maraschino cherries

Eaxh serving provides 434 calories. Not recommendnded for diabetic diets.

Combine sugar, coca, salt and whipped topping mix. Prepare according to whipped topping package directions. Fold in walnuts, bananas and cherries. Spoon over pudding.

SODA FOUNTAIN RICE DESSERTS

In warmer weather, rice pudding makes a better base for soda fountain sundas than ice cream, as it can be scooped up ahead and topped just before serving. In fact, rice pudding tastes better when it is served warm or at room temperature.

Next time you are looking for that "different" dessert, try a dish of rice pudding topped with:

Hot fudge sauce

Maple syrup and chopped pecans

Chocolate sauce and ground peanuts

butterschotch sauce

Cut-up fresh fruits that have ben marinatd in barandy or a liqueur

raspberry syrup and toasted coconut

Pitted sweet cherries with syrup from can, topped with a small sugar cube which has been soaked with lemon extract; then ignite for Flaming Cherries Jubilee.

sliced bananas garnished with grated chocolate.

'Potted' foods common in cookery of Britain

Craig Claiborne

Recently I read a British novel in which two men dined at the Savoy Hotel and ordered potted salmon. Can you tell me what it is and why it is called potted?

A. Potted foods are quite common in British cookery. I presume, logically I hope, that potted foods are so-called because they were originally and often still are served in small pots or crocks. Potted salmon and other fish are first skinned, boned and cooked. They are then put in a crock or other container and covered with clarified butter. Perhaps the most famous of Britain's potted foods are shrimp. These, too, are covered with butter and eaten cold with hot toast.

Q. I was recently served a Middle Eastern cheese called kaskawan. Can you tell me the country of origin, what kind of milk it is made from and the etymology of the name?

A. One of the best books on cheese is Cheese Varieties and Descriptions, published by the United States Department of Agriculture. It is Handbook No. 54 and may be obtained by sending your request to the Science and Education Administration, United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D.C. 20250.

The cheese of which you wrote has numerous names including kaskaval and Katschkawalj. A similar Italian cheese is Cacciocavallo. According to the handbook, kaskaval is made in Romania, Katschkawalj in Serbia, Romania, Bulgaria and Macedonia. These cheeses are made of ewe's milk.

Cascaval de Peneteleu is a similar but somewhat drier cheese made in Romania.

Cacciocavallo is made in Italy from cow's milk and sometimes a blend of cow's and ewe's milk. The names of all these cheeses are related. The name stems from the manner in which the cheeses are hung to be cured. They are said to look as if they were hung over a saddle. Thus cheese on horseback, which translates in Italian as "cacio a cavallo."

Q. My brother has just returned from a cooking school in Paris. I recently prepared a cream of sorrel soup for him and added a dash of curry powder. It was delicious, but he says that with the curry you can't call it a cream of sorrel soup. Do you agree?

A. A cream of sorrel soup is known in French kitchens as a potage Germiny. If you added curry, it would certainly not be a classic potage Germiny. You might get around your sibling by calling it a potage Germiny au kari, which would indicate a curried cream of sorrel soup. For what it's worth, a basic cream of curry soup is known as creme senagelese or is that confusing things?

Q. For the past few months I have been enjoying a dish listed on Chinese menus as dumplings in hot oil. Could I make the hot sauce at home and can you print a recipe?

A. Here is a recipe for a hot oil sauce that is excellent served over simmered won ton. It is a sauce that Virginia Lee uses for shredded chicken breast with cold egg noodles.

OIL AND SESAME SAUCE

¼ cup sesame paste (tahini)
3 tablespoons cold brewed tea or water
1 or 2 tablespoons hot oil, available in Chinese groceries and supermarkets
3 tablespoons light soy sauce
3 tablespoons red wine vinegar
2 teaspoons sugar
Salt to taste
¼ cup peanut, vegetable or corn oil
2 tablespoons finely minced garlic
1 tablespoon sesame oil.

1. Put the sesame paste in a bowl and, using a wire whisk, beat in the tea or water.

2. Stir in the remaining ingredients. But take care in adding the hot oil. Do not add it beyond your capacity to swallow.

Yield: About 1 cup.

Note: This sauce is delicious served over a bed of boiled, shredded chicken and cold, cooked fine egg noodles.

helpful hints

Points in cabbage preparation for either raw salad or for cooking: get freshest head possible, it need not be solid but it should be green on outside at least. Use dark green leaves for highest vitamin and mineral values.

Wash briefly, never soak, just before use. Stumps and thick bases of leaves can be cooked in a soup for flavor and removed if wished.

To cook wedges, cut cabbage into quarters. Use minimum of boiling water. Time 7 minutes from time water returns to boiling. One whole new-crop garlic clove enhances sweet cabbage flavor. Discard before serving.

At the produce counter: The plumpest cucumbers and summer squash may seem to offer more for your money, but the bigger they are, the bigger the seeds inside. Pick out the heaviest green peppers, and you'll have the ones with the thickest walls.

Fresh new cabbage healthful, digestible

By HILDA BEASTALL

Green cabbage when available fresh in this early fall season from either local store displays or home garden is an easily digestible and healthful food.

If you have always avoided this vegetable give it another chance to prove how delicious it really is when carefully prepared.

Fresh and uncooked it is at its best nutritionally; lightly cooked for a few minutes with appropriate seasonings, cabbage regains favor for its delicate flavor.

Nutritionally, green cabbage rates high in vitamins and minerals which make it an ideal vegetable for using uncooked in a salad as often as it can be obtained. Cooking destroys some of the nutrients and leaches out others into the cooking water if water is used. Adding this small amount of liquid as a mixer for another meal catches some of the goodness.

For a top-of-range skillet cabbage dish complete enough for an economical supper main dish, try Creamed Macaroni and Cabbage Skillet while late summer and fall cabbages are still a healthy green.

CREAMED MACARONI AND CABBAGE

400 mL short cut macaroni
45 mL soft margarine
750 mL thinly sliced green cabbage
30 mL wholewheat flour
2 mL salt
1 mL (level) chopped candied ginger OR a small piece root ginger
400 mL milk from skim milk powder
150 mL wholewheat bread crumbs
50 mL wheat germ
50 mL wheat bran
25 mL brewer's yeast (torula)
50 mL grated cheddar or parmesan cheese

Meanwhile heat margarine in large skillet or frypan with lid. Add prepared cabbage, toss with two forks to coat with melted fat.

Simmer, covered, with low heat for 10 minutes. Shake in flour, salt, ginger. With spoon, stir well, adding milk gradually to thicken until bubbly. Add cooked macaroni, reheat well to just below boiling.

Remove from heat; add mixed breadcrumbs, wheat germ, bran, yeast and cheese as topping. Serve hot; some topping with each serving.

For contrast have one other hot cooked vegetable such as sliced beets. This complete dish takes about 35 minutes to prepare and cook.

When the nutritive value of the food is considered and the low cost in cents, the time is well spent for such a satisfying, tasty and attractive dish. Serves 3 or 4 according to size of portions.

Stuffed Cabbage Leaves are probably of farm-home origin, for in their most simple form they make use of basic ingredients found in country kitchens. Today we can keep these ingredients in our refrigerators or get some fresh from our city vegetable gardens at this season.

So here is a very simple recipe for Cabbage Rolls. The only not so simple thing is wrapping the leaves snugly around the filling. But no doubt dexterous fingers can do the job perfectly.

STUFFED CABBAGE ROLLS

2 cups boiling water
½ tsp. salt
1 cup oat flakes, or wheat flakes, or brown rice
8 large green outer cabbage leaves
1 Tbsp soft margarine or oil
2 Tbsp finely chopped onion
2 Tbsp finely chopped carrot
1 Tbsp finely chopped parsley
Few grains chili powder (optional)
1 Beaten egg

Add flakes to boiling salted water; cook at simmering point 15 minutes. Meanwhile boil cabbage leaves whole for 3 minutes. Drain, and carefully remove leaves. It is wise to prepare 2 extra leaves in case one breaks badly or gets torn.

In skillet or frypan, heat margarine or oil. Add onion; cook until yellow. Add carrot and parsley. Cook 3 minutes until tender. Season with chili powder or use a little curry, or ground ginger.

Spoon equal amount of stuffing on each softened leaf. Wrap closely around stuffing, folding in sides neatly. Place on the spare softened cabbage leaves in greased casserole to fit.

Make a sauce as follows:

1½ cups tomato juice OR cut-up peeled tomatoes
½ cup homemade yogurt
2 Tbsp melted soft margarine few grain salt and pepper

Mix and pour over rolls. Cover and cook in moderate oven 177 deg. C for about 30 minutes or until rolls can be pierced with fork.

The whole recipe will serve 4.

Stuffed Cabbage Leaves take longer to prepare than Creamed Macaroni and Cabbage but since the stuffing flavor with the cabbage is so delicate, the result is worth the time. Bake potatoes at same time.

Yukon Commissioner quits over job shuffle

WHITEHORSE (UPC) — Yukon Commissioner Ione Christensen has resigned her post following a federal decision to reduce her powers and bring the vast territory closer to full provincial status.

Northern Affairs Minister Jake Epp said Tuesday the federal government had established a territorial premier and cabinet in a move to fulfil a campaign promise to let the Yukon decide if it wants provincial status in Canada.

Epp said Commissioner Christensen's future role would be that of an "active broker" between the elected Yukon government and the federal government.

He said the commissioner will accept the advice of the government leader in all matters pertaining to the administration of the Yukon, a sparsely populated region with a total land-water area of 536,220 square kilometres.

Christensen, who received official notice of Epp's decision by a hand-delivered letter Tuesday afternoon, said she was "frustrated, angry and extremely unhappy" with Epp's decision to strip her of her powers, reducing her to a "quasi-lieutenant governor."

She said that she was giving "serious consideration" to forming her own political party, the Yukoners' United Party, to do battle with the federal government.

Meanwhile, in Yellowknife, N.W.T., the former head of the territorial government's recreation division was convicted in court on three counts of fraud and one of theft.

Raymond Goulet will face sentencing Nov. 21 for the offences which involved misuse of his authority in making travel arrangements to defraud the government of some $2,000 worth of air tickets.

Proud destroyer off to scrapyard

HALIFAX (CP) — The once-proud Canadian destroyer-escort St. Laurent heads for an inglorious end today when she is towed through Halifax harbor to a scrapyard.

Leo Beazley, a scrap metal dealer in neighboring Dartmouth, purchased the St. Laurent for $76,250 from Crown Assets Disposal Corp. He said Tuesday he will have the vessel towed from the Bedford Magazine to another berth in the harbor where she will be scrapped.

The prototype of her class, the St. Laurent was the first Canadian designed warship and the first new Canadian warship built after the Second World War. A totaL of 14 vessels of her type were built at a cost of about $15 million each.

Air Canada hunting more DC-9 cracks

MONTREAL (CP) — Air Canada is once again inspecting the rear bulkheads of its DC-9s following a directive from the plane's manufacturer, McDonnell Douglas Corp., to examine all the jetliners for stress cracks.

The move follows a directive earlier in the day from the United States Federal Aviation Administration to U.S. airlines requiring them inspect all DC-9 craft.

A previous directive, issued after an Air Canada plane lost its tailcone section containing the emergency exit at 7,620 metres, included only DC-9s fitted with a plug-like emergency exit instead of a stairway in the rear.

An Air Canada spokesman said Tuesday the company has already inspected all its planes but is now inspecting them again. The airline only has three DC-9s with the stairway in its fleet, he added.

All its other DC-9s are of the model with the emergency exit doors.

The Air Canada incident left four people with minor injuries. The plane, which was en route from Boston to Nova Scotia, was able to return to Boston's Logan Airport.

Inspections of several planes since the Air Canada incident have revealed cracks in both models after logging a lot of flying time.

McDonnell Douglas Corp. stopped making DC-9s with the emergency rear exit doors in 1974 and since has made only models with the stairway door.

About 100 DC-9s were affected by the first FAA directive.

Dempster stays open

OTTAWA (CP) — Northern Affairs Minister Jake Epp announced Tuesday the federal government has agreed to provide the Northwest Territories with enough road maintenance money to keep the Dempster Highway open this winter.

The extra money promised (no figure was given in the government news release) will enable the NWT government to budget for snowplowing from the Yukon border to Fort McPherson, a relatively short portion of the highway. Snow-clearing of the rest of the highway is already covered in the NWT and Yukon budgets.

Man. elections test for Tories

WINNIPEG (UPC) — Premier Sterling Lyon's Conservative government will get its first test next Tuesday when 12 candidates — including two women, two members of the Western Democracy Party, and one Marxist-Leninist — vie for three seats in provincial byelections.

At issue is the state of Manitoba's economy, recent indications of a population drop, and the future of the government automobile insurance monopoly.

The byelections will also pit the personal popularity of Lyon against that of interim New Democratic Party leader Howard Pawley, whose leadership will be on the line at a party convention three weeks after the elections.

In Fort Rouge, city councillor June Westbury is trying to retain the only seat the Liberals won in the 1977 general election. It became vacant when Lloyd Axworthy resigned to run successfully in the May 22 federal election.

Her rivals: lawyer Vic Savino for the NDP and businessman Hugh McDonald for the Conservatives.

NDP candidate Donald Jewison and Liberal Jay Prober are also running, as is Western Democracy Party candidate William Hawryluk.

Former Manitoba NDP president Vic Schroeder will try to keep Rossmere riding for his party. The seat has been vacant since last December when NDP leader Ed Schreyer resigned to become Governor-General.

Pitted against him are city councillor Harold Piercy for the Conservatives, Liberal Sandy Clance, Western Democracy Party candidate Linda Penner, and Marxist-Leninist Manuel Gitterman.

Rememberence Day mother chosen

CARLYLE, Sask. (CP) — Eliza Beatty, 88, of Carlyle, said Tuesday she has been selected to represent Canadian motherhood at the national war memorial Rememberence Day ceremony in Ottawa Nov. 11.

Mrs. Beatty and her late husband Walter lost two sons during the Second World War and a third son was wounded.

Child hiring exemption sought

GRANDE PRAIRIE (CP) — A group of city restaurant owners is seeking exemption from provincial labor regulations which prohibit hiring children under the age of 15 in restaurants.

The request was considered at a special industrial relations board meeting in Edmonton last week.

"They claim they have to tap the under-15 market to operate," says Don Battrum, regional manager of the labor standards branch. "They can't get employees."

Battrum said the problem first surfaced in March when his office received a complaint that a restaurant was hiring under-age children.

"We weren't aware of the widespread nature until just recently. We've been made aware of many instances where the regulations have been violated."

Water safe but smelly

EDMONTON (CP) — City water has been tinted with an unpleasant odor and taste since last week but public health inspectors have declared it safe to drink, said Aime Beaulieu, director of water and sanitation for the city.

Beaulieu said an "esthetic" problem sometimes occurs in the spring when heavy water flow sends more waste into the North Saskatchewan River, requiring the city's water supply to be more heavily treated with chlorine.

But staff are puzzled by a problem in the fall. Beaulieu said it is possible an unknowing person dumped waste into the river upstream of the city.

Quadruplets born in Ont.

RICHARD MELOCHE
. . . proud papa

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — A 25-year-old Amherstburg, Ont., woman gave birth to quadruplet girls Tuesday at St. Joseph's Hospital and all were reported in good condition.

Paula Meloche was moved to St. Joseph's about a month ago because of the lack of neo-natal intensive care units in Windsor where she had been under the care of Dr. W. K. Lai. Lai said Tuesday there was a threat that she would go into premature labor, so she was moved to London.

Mrs. Meloche's husband, Richard, 23, said he and his wife have not yet named the babies. For now he is calling them A, B, C and D in order of birth.

Citizen's lobby stirring up a storm

TORONTO (CP) — For an ordinary-looking insurance agent from London, Ont., Colin Brown knows how to stir up a national fuss.

He's the man behind those advertisements that assail everything from big government to federal civil service pensions.

Brown, 65, is the brains, the power and the personality behind the National Citizens' Coalition — a conservative, free-enterprise lobby.

Recently, the coalition ran a series of full-page newspaper advertisements in the country's major dailies — some at a cost of $10,000 each — to protest the federal government's decision to let 50,000 Indochinese boat people into Canada.

"I want to make it clear that we are not against the acceptance of 50,000 Vietnamese refugees on humanitarian grounds. In fact we favor it.

"We are against decisions made entirely on emotional grounds without regard to future consequences."

It was the latest campaign in a series of many.

Brown started the coalition in 1968 as a vehicle for the silent majority to sound off about what was bugging them.

Now the coalition has 25,000 members and a yearly budget of $268,000. And it has so many $10 memberships coming into its Toronto headquarters that it is planning branch offices with full-time, paid staffs in Vancouver and Calgary.

Meanwhile, Brown is putting in his time as the coalition's head crusader, reading letters that begin with: "As an ordinary Canadian, I wish to protest . . ."

They come — sometimes by the sackfull — from people who may be a little bigoted and rightwing in their views, Brown says, but who generally work hard, pay their taxes and stay out of trouble.

And they all feel threatened by big bureaucracies and big government.

The coalition's latest campaign regarding the boat people hit a nerve. Brown has received 4,000 replies to his ads, many of them full of abuse. But he also got 700 new members.

Wardair nips ABCs

EDMONTON (CP) — Wardair International Ltd. has delayed planning for the introduction of domestic advanced booking charter flights, or ABCs, in hopes that favorable changes in charter rules are coming, president Max Ward said Tuesday.

The Canadian transport commission announced that the Edmonton-based charter carrier had been given a licence to operate domestic air charters between Toronto and Vancouver, Toronto and Edmonton and Toronto and Calgary between March and September for the next two years.

Ward said the airline would probably carry domestic charter passengers on legs of international flights in Canada while awaiting changes in charter rules.

Ward said the commission is considering changes as a follow-up to charter regulation hearings it held last July. He said the commission will hold a closed meeting on the subject Oct. 15.

He said since Transport Minister Don Mazankowski has taken office he has indicated "he is singing off the same sheet music as we are."

Mazankowski has indicated he favors more deregulation of the Canadian airline industry, which Wardair also favors so it can better compete with the large scheduled carriers, such as Air Canada and CP Air.

Visa rejected

Chargex con man awaiting sentence

BRAMPTON, Ont. (CP) — A Toronto man who told a Brampton woman he was a Texas millionaire and ran up $3,000 on her Chargex card was convicted in provincial court Tuesday of defrauding the woman and the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce of more than $200.

Michael Melvin Smith, 26, is to appear today for sentencing.

The 32-year-old woman testified she met Smith at an airport disco and a three-week romance followed.

Court was told that Smith identifed himself as Michael Delzato and said he owned Studio 54 disco in New York, the Ports in Toronto, a car rental agency in the U.S. and a ranch in Dallas.

The woman said he promised to marry her and ran up $3,000 worth of bills on her credit card before leaving the city.

During the brief romance, she said, Smith was to have arranged trips outside Canada, including one to Dallas, in his private plane.

She never saw the plane.

Judge Kenneth Langdon called Smith a calculated schemer.

"He (Smith) recited a rather singular history of himself . . . . Incredible as it may seem, Miss S. was thoroughly convinced of his claims. She swallowed the bait, hook, line and sinker."

$1.27M ticket to court

TORONTO (CP) — A Hamilton businessman accused of stealing a $1.2-million lottery prize from a Kingston, Ont., doctor admitted the deed following his arrest, the doctor told a county court trial Tuesday.

Dr. Megeri Ede said James Nicholas telephoned him to apologize following his arrest on theft charges May 25.

Ede, who says he won the $1,278,127.50 prize in the April 28 Lottario draw, gave Nicholas the ticket to collect so Ede could avoid the publicity, court has been told.

Nicholas was arrested a week after claiming the prize, the biggest in Canadian history.

The night of his arrest, Nicholas, of Strathroy, near London, Ont., phoned Ede to ask whether the charges would be dropped if the money was returned, the doctor testified.

Ede said Nicholas told him that he meant to transfer the money to the doctor's account, but didn't know how.

Earlier testimony showed that Nicholas had made reservations to fly to his native Granada and was at Toronto International Airport, ready to depart, when he was arrested.

Under cross-examination, Ede said he didn't meet Nicholas after the pickup as agreed previously and had instructed his wife not to reveal his whereabouts to Nicholas if he phoned.

The trial continues.

Alcoholic tapes fuel RCMP ire

HAMILTON (CP) — CJJD-AM Radio has been barred from broadcasting a tape that gives instructions on producing fuel alcohol, station reporter Doug Cameron said Tuesday.

Cameron said the RCMP began an investigation last week after the Hamilton station played two tapes explaining how the fuel is made.

Some types of fuel alcohol, if consumed, can cause blindness.

Following broadcast of the tapes, the RCMP obtained a cease-and-desist order barring the replaying of the tapes.

The station also has been barred from reproducing the tapes for use elsewhere.

Family cheques system speeded

OTTAWA (CP) — Family allowance cheques could be delivered up to two days sooner under a new post office delivery system beginning this month.

The post office said today it will deliver the cheques over three days rather than in a single day as in the past. Deliveries would start two working days ahead of the normally-scheduled delivery date to better handle the 3.6 million such cheques mailed each month.

Family allowance cheques are normally delivered on the 20th of the month. If the date falls on a Saturday or Sunday, deliveries will begin three working-days beforehand.

Six die when plane dives, crashes

PRINCE ALBERT, Sask. (CP) — RCMP say all six persons aboard a Beaver aircraft owned by Great Shield Airways were killed Tuesday when the plane nose-dived into a wooded area about 280 kilometres north of this community.

Cause of the crash has not been determined.

The names and hometowns of the five passengers and pilot were not immediately available.

Tories to increase defence spending

By VICTOR MACKIE
FP News Service

OTTAWA — Defence Minister Allan McKinnon said today the new Progressive Conservative government is committed to increasing the Canadian defence budget and he is confident the cabinet will carry through that commitment.

The government has also indicated to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization that the new Tory administration will be honoring its commitment to increase by three per cent its contributim to NATO.

McKinnon recently travelled to Washington where he consulted with his opposite number Secretary of Defence Harold Brown.

"I received a very warm welcome and we discussed a number of points of mutual interest."

McKinnon, in an interview, said he expects the choice of a new fighter aircraft will have been made before the end of this year. The price tag for the new jet fighter is $2.34 billion in 1977 dollars or about $2.9 billion in current dollars.

He said he expects the decision as to which company will get the contract for the new fighter will be decided by the year-end and perhaps earlier. But the final negotiations will not necessarily be completed or the contract signed until after the year end.

A new white paper on defence is not high up on the minister's priorities at this stage. However he expects a defence white paper will be finally drafted and made public in the fall of 1980.

The defence minister wants to press ahead with the purchase of the new jet fighters. He consider them essential in the present setup of the armed forces.

There is no possibility of obtaining the F-14 fighters from the Iranian air force. McKinnon said all avenues that might lead to such a purchase had been explored and finally abandoned as the Iranian government had "blown hot and cold" on such a deal.

McKinnon is confident that the Canadian government will be able to proceed and pay for the fighter program and then turn its attention to replacing this country's aging warships. Present plans involve the purchase of half a dozen new warships in the mid-eighties.

Tribute to Dief livens Commons

OTTAWA (UPC) — A sombre mood in Parliament changed to laughter Tuesday when Liberal Leader Pierre Trudeau used the type of lines that made former Prime Minister John Diefenbaker famous to describe his new-found role in opposition.

While Prime Minister Joe Clark and New Democratic Party Leader Ed Broadbent gave formal praise to the former Tory leader who died in the summer, Trudeau remembered the mischievous side of Diefenbaker in a way that even the "Chief" would have admired.

The other leaders lauded Diefenbaker's populist views and the strength with which he fought for his views, but Trudeau concentrated on the role Diefenbaker held in the House of Commons for nearly four decades.

"He was part of this chamber in an almost unnatural sort of way. Even when he didn't speak, you knew he was here," he said. "I don't know about other members, but I have the uneasy feeling he is still part of this place.

"Just this morning as I was speaking my thoughts on the role of the opposition ... I half looked over at the other side expecting to see him shaking his finger at me and thundering, 'Never has there been such a conversion since Saul on the road to Damascus.'"

At the sound of Diefenbaker's often-used phrase, delivered with the voice and gestures of the "Chief," the chamber dissolved in laughter.

"He sometimes mentioned to me the loneliness of being the only surviving former prime minister and seemed sincerely keen to have some company," said Trudeau, who had been the frequent object of Diefenbaker's wit when he headed the former Liberal government.

"I now know how he felt and sincerely share his keenness," Trudeau said, with the same mischievous look at Clark that Diefenbaker would have had after a well-placed barb.

Socreds denied status

OTTAWA (UPC) — The five-member caucus of the Social Credit Party was denied official party status in the House of Commons Tuesday despite attempts by Socred Leader Fabien Roy to have his party recognized.

"While it has come to be thought that 12 members were required, we overstepped it when the party had only 11 members the last time," New Democratic Party House Leader Stanley Knowles said in debate before the motion for party status was overwhelmingly defeated.

"Now they are down to five. What happens when it gets down to four, three, two?" Knowles asked.

Merchant fleet gets nod

SASKATOON (CP) — Canada pays up to $4 billion in shipping tariffs to other countries because we do not have our own merchant fleet, federal Transport Minister Don Mazankowski said Tuesday.

In a telephone interview from Ottawa, Mazankowski said that amount is "a lot of money when we have a current account deficit."

In Tuesday's Throne speech at the opening of Parliament, the Progressive Conservative government announced plans to support the revival of a merchant marine fleet. The government said it will ensure an even flow of shipbuilding contracts to domestic yards, but the speech gave no details.

However Mazankowski said the government should be prepared to provide the kind of environment conducive to the re-establishment of the Canadian merchant fleet.

He said there are more than 100 Canadian-owned ships operating under foreign flags and the government must provide the necessary kinds of tax incentives, deferrals and accelerated depreciation to the three or four firms which own the ships.

"We've got to be competitive in the international climate and Canada has not been," he said. "As a result we're paying out up to $4 billion a year in shipping tariffs."

Canadian ship owners find it more economical to register under foreign flags of convenience, the minister said.

Mazankowski said costs of Canadian labor now can compete with other countries and this is one area where industry and labor "are on the same side."

Time Canada sued over cut

TORONTO (CP) — A Toronto man is suing Time Canada Ltd. on behalf of about 200,000 Ontario subscribers, saying Time magazine's publishers breached their contract with him and other subscribers when they stopped publishing a Canadian edition and substituted the American edition at a higher price.

Lawyer Richard Sommers, representing Richard Cobbold, a University of Toronto engineering professor, said the outcome of the Ontario Supreme Court trial which began Tuesday could affect more than 525,000 Canadians who subscribed to the magazine when it stopped publishing the Canadian edition in March, 1976.

Time ended the Canadian magazine when federal tax legislation no longer allowed advertisers in Time to claim the cost of advertising as a business expense.

Cobbold says in his claim statement that when Time stopped publishing the Canadian magazine the U.S. magazine was unilaterally sent to him at a higher rate.

Cobbold is asking the court to rule that he and fellow Canadian Time subscribers receive the magazine for the full term of the original subscription contract or a refund for the portion of the subscription period which Time cancelled when it substituted the U.S. version.

In its defence, Time says that when the federal government introduced its new tax legislation, the magazine was prevented from retaining its status as a Canadian magazine.

Stephen Larue, president and publisher of Time, said that when he was informed the magazine would have to be 80-per-cent Canadian content for it to be exempt from the tax legislation, the Canadian version of the magazine folded.

Time says that at the time of the closure Cobbold had the opportunity to get a refund on the unexpired part of his subscription if he wished.

The magazine is also contesting Cobbold's right to sue on behalf of all Canadian subscribers to Time.

Petro-Can poll shows Tories on wrong track

TORONTO (UPC) — Most Canadians want the federal government to retain Petro-Canada, the crown corporation the Clark administration wants to dismantle, a Gallup poll has found.

The poll, made public today, separated Petro-Can's functions into three categories: exploration for oil and natural gas, purchasing oil from other governments and retail sales of oil and gas.

Of the 1,031 adult Canadians interviewed, 75 per cent wanted Petro-Can to keep on exploring, 57 per cent favored its role of buying foreign oil, and 54 per cent thought the company should be involved in retailing petroleum products.

Only 7 per cent opposed continued exploration, and 18 per cent were undecided. Eighteen per cent were against foreign oil purchasing by Petro-Can with 25 per cent undecided; 20 per cent were against its retailing functions, while 26 per cent didn't know.

The poll also found that those in favor of continued activity by Petro-Can included more men than women, more high-income than low-income earners, and more university graduates than non-graduates.

The Gallup organization interviewed the poll's subjects, all over 18 years old, in early September.

Speech lacked fire

OTTAWA (UPC) — The Clark government's first Speech from the Throne did not "set the country on fire" or contain any positive leadership to alleviate Canada's economic problems, opposition leaders have charged.

"What I wanted to see was economic leadership," New Democratic Party leader Ed Broadbent told reporters Tuesday after the Conservative government's speech opening the 31st Parliament was read by Governor General Edward Schreyer in the Senate Chamber.

Broadbent said he hoped the budget, expected later in the fall, would contain specific proposals lacking in the Throne Speech, which is just intended as an outline. "But as a Throne Speech, this one is not going to set the country on fire."

Liberal leader Pierre Trudeau, in his new role as Commons' Opposition Leader, criticized the government for its absence of constitutional proposals.

"Nowhere do we see the idea that the nation is more than just the sum of its parts," said Trudeau, who had campaigned during the election on a platform of a strong federal government.

In British Columbia, Grace McCarthy in her role as acting premier called the government's throne speech "direct and sensible".

McCarthy, standing in for Premier Bill Bennett who is travelling in South Korea, said she was encouraged because the speech included many promises made during the last federal election campaign.

McCarthy, the minister of human resources, said she hopes the proposed ministry for social development will help the government come to grips with the fiscal and policy aspects of federal social programs such as Indian affairs and payments to provinces for social assistance.

John Helliwell, an economist at the University of B.C., said "like many throne speeches, it's long on good intentions and short on specifics."

Some relief from capital gains taxes would be the biggest boon in stimulating Canadian investment in the private and public sectors, said Tony Hepburn, president of Odlum Brown brokerage house.

Personal incomes up

OTTAWA (CP) — Personal income last year was $189,014 million, an increase of 10.4 per cent from 1977, Statistics Canada reported today.

During the same period the cost of living rose 8.4 per cent.

In 1977, personal income from all sources was $171,195 million.

Last year's income was distributed among the provinces as follows:

Newfoundland, 1.6 per cent; Prince Edward Island, less than one per cent; Nova Scotia, 2.9 per cent; New Brunswick, 2.2 per cent; Quebec, 25.4 per cent, Ontario, 39 per cent; Manitoba, 4.1 per cent; Saskatchewan, 3.7 per cent; Alberta, 8.7 per cent; British Columbia, 11.8 per cent.

Greenpeace status queried

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Greenpeace Foundation should be denied official status at hearings into the construction of a nuclear power plant at Skagit Valley, says counsel to a United States government licensing board.

Greenpeace, which applied for the official status, cannot be separated from "the population as a whole" on general interest in the safety of the plant, says the counsel to the Atomic Safety Licensing Board.

The Puget Sound Power and Light Co. has applied for a permit to build a nuclear-fired electrical generator at Sedro Wolley, Wash., 60 kilometres from the B.C. border.

"There is no indication that Canadian civil defence and public welfare . . . is a matter which is relevant to this proceeding."

"This results from the fact that the Canadian border is well beyond the radius of territory within which evacuation of persons must be considered," it says.

Greenpeace and other Canadian organizations such as the B.C. Medical Association have argued that a nuclear accident at Sedro Wolley could affect Canada.

Sleek, grey, electric!

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — A sleek, grey car built around 18 batteries and a microcomputer was presented Tuesday as proof that electric cars can meet consumer demand for stylish, efficient and economic transportation.

The experimental car, designed and built with $7 million in U.S. federal funds "demonstrates that a well-engineered electric car can meet the majority of our driving needs and virtually all the needs of a second car — and do so economically," said Conrad Weinlein of Globe-Union Inc.

Government and industry officials told a press conference here that the electric car, with a top speed of more than 100 km/h, has a range of 190 kilometres when driven at a steady 55 km/h.

They said stop-and-go city driving drops the range to 120 kilometres miles before the batteries need an eight-hour recharging from a standard electric outlet.

The four-passenger car was designed to be suitable for mass production in the next decade with a pricetag of $6,400, in today's funds.

Electric Test Vehicle One was developed by General Electric Co., Chrysler and Globe-Union under contract with the U.S. department of energy.

The car, which hums quietly as it moves, uses an enhanced version of conventional automobile batteries.

Weinlein, whose company developed the batteries, said they provide 30 per cent more energy per pound than standard batteries and should provide 48,000 to 80,000 kilometres of driving.

He estimated the replacement cost at $900.

Like living next door to Calcutta 'hellhole'

A Saanich woman's complaint that a group of uncontrollable youngsters from a housing complex next door keeps her awake will be investigated by council.

Gertrude Morris, 3263 Rutledge, told Saanich's finance committee Tuesday she is afraid of being hit by things hurled over her fence from the Scotia Green housing complex.

Morris described the complex as being like the "hellhole of Calcutta."

Not only do youths throw junk into her yard, she complained, but they have noisy parties that last most of the night.

The landlord refuses to police the building, according to Morris, who said she is losing weight from worry.

The complaint will be investigated by the bylaw enforcement committee.

Saanich moving on 10-acre parcel

Saanich is negotiating to purchase 10 acres in Mystic Vale from Belvedere Estates after the University of Victoria failed to obtain the property to prevent its subdivision.

Cadboro Bay Residents Association last year asked Saanich or the university to buy the land, but the municipality said then it would cost too much.

Saanich has since received a $694,700 Municipal Incentives Grant and the finance committee Tuesday decided to try to get the property located at Cadboro Bay just east of Haro Road.

At one point Belvedere was thinking about building a 10-storey high-rise containing more than 200 units, but the proposal was turned down because of inadequate services to the site.

The finance committee decided the balance of the grant will be used for public works projects, land acquisition and park upgrading.

Road vote slated

Saanich will hold a referendum next month on a $2.5 million road improvement project.

Council decided Tuesday the referendum will be included on the Nov. 17 election ballot.

Total cost of the 10-year program would be $4.3 million but the municipality expects to get about $1.8 million from the provincial government.

Saanich will pay for a number of items including road resurfacing, property acquisition for highways and street-widening.

Pupil-teacher ratio 'fetish' draws Brice blast

By AB KENT

Teachers keep hacking away at the teacher-pupil ratio in Victoria schools without getting at the problem, former school board chairman Susan Brice said Tuesday.

She was commenting at a school board meeting on a brief from Greater Victoria Teachers Association asking for 33 more teachers to be hired next year.

Brice said she was not impressed with the pupil-teacher ratio fetish and suggested that in classes where there is lack of progress the fault could be attributed to the style and enthusiasm of the teacher rather than the size of the class.

The problem had not yet been recognized, and meanwhile the teachers' association keeps trying to lower the ratio, she said.

GVTA president Trevor Calkins said the increase in teaching staff would help correct deficiencies in basic writing skills by lowering the ratio of pupils to teachers and enabling teachers to devote more time to students.

The association recently delivered a brief showing achievement is linked with smaller classes.

The proposed new teachers, he said, would cost $825,000, including an inflationary factor, adding about one mill to the tax rate. At 1.25 mills it was estimated a typical property owner with $69,000 dwelling would pay an additional $13 school tax.

Breaking down the total, Calkins suggested 12 of the new teachers should teach secondary English or social studies, 10 should be assigned to intermediate grades between four and seven, and 11 should be librarians.

Calkins' brief also asked trustees to spend more on school supplies, to at least raise the district from 74th out of 75 B.C. school districts. Greater Victoria spends an average $51 compared with a provincial average of $74.

Trustee Peter Yorke said Calkins was "very bold" in asking for 33 new teachers, and suggested the GVTA proposals would add something like three mills to the tax rate.

Trustee Mark Fisher said he would be reluctant to hire more teachers until the teachers themselves demonstrated more professionalism and results in the classroom, and Trustee Winfield Mott said the decision to cut back supplies this term was a conscious budgetting effort to avoid teacher layoffs.

Chairman Carol Pickup and Trustee John Young supported the brief's position on the pupil-teacher ratio.

Class size size was significant, Young said.

"No private school in the province would tolerate the class size we have in the public school system."

Pickup said the brief was "extremely practical," and "mildly conservative." The district has some completely unacceptable class sizes, as many as 32 in some elementary schools, and there was no way a teacher can cope with that many children, particularly if they needed extra attention.

Superintendent Allan Stables said the brief was little different from what the administration would propose, that more teachers are needed. He added that teachers in the system have to spend too much time on non-teaching duties such as library work and counselling and that this will be reviewed.

Mom objects to extra fees

A mother's protest against paying $75 in extra fees for her three high school children made little progress at a Greater Victoria school board meeting Tuesday.

Trustee John Young complained on behalf of the woman, whose husband is unemployed, that she was unable to pay for the extras amounting to about $25 per child for such things as student fees and art supplies.

He said he had told the woman that education is free and that if she was unable to pay, that would be all right. But the woman said the children were afraid the word would get around among their classmates if the school district picked up the tab, and that would be embarrassing.

Young said he was sympathetic to the woman's plight and asked the board to reiterate to principals its policy on voluntary fees.

Superintendent Allan Stables said the policy objects to fees being charged but does not prohibit principals from exercising discretion.

"The level of instruction in Victoria is very, very, very, very basic," Stables said.

Voluntary fees must go on or else programs like senior secondary art will come to "a grinding, crashing halt."

Impressive statistics on dropouts

Only one youngster is back on the street after taking part in last year's special school program for James Bay dropouts, Greater Victoria school trustees were told Tuesday.

James Bay Community Resources Board vice-chairman Bob Milne said the Education Support Program (ESP) had a successful year and impressed the board with its results, which he said were achieved at minimum cost.

Teacher Terry Loeppky said of the 28 pupils re-enrolled, one is raising a family, one is back on the street and three cannot be traced.

The rest are either working or enrolled in school programs.

This year 20 students, 10 from James Bay and 10 from other parts of the core community are taking the program. They range in age from 14 to 19 and 15 are girls.

They pay $15 each in fees.

The school district is being asked to provide $26,560 to support the program next year.

Eligible students are those who have been out of regular school for three months. The ESP is designed to provide upgrading in maths, science and English to the Grade 10 level and to improve social skills, and the confidence and skills needed to progress in regular school classes.

One woman who spoke in support of the program said her two daughters had benefitted from the relaxed program in which pupils relate better to the work and their teacher.

McKenzie runs for third term

Ald. Ron McKenzie announced Tuesday he is running for a third term on Victoria city council.

He is the fifth to declare his candidacy for alderman.

Other items included police foot patrols and completion of the Clover Point sewage outfall and a start on a treatment plant.

"We must get better before we get bigger," he said is his slogan for re-election.

"This slogan demands control of our growth and type of development, but it also vindicates our type of government. Municipal government must get better before it gets bigger."

In his first two-year term on council McKenzie was a controversial figure who frequently made the headlines with sensational charges, but since dropping to the bottom of the poll in 1977 he has adopted a much lower profile.

McKenzie has concentrated on cultural affairs, and as the city's representative on the Royal Theatre committee he was instrumental in drafting plans for a $2.3 million restoration of the old building.

Other policies he announced are direct and continuous funding for the city's senior citizens' centres, further development of neighborhood community programs, fair and equitable municipal funding for the arts and social services and B.C. government funding for Inner Harbor beautification.

Lost iceberg painting may fetch record $1M

LONDON (CP) — A painting done in Labrador by U.S. artist Frederick Edwin Church, lost for 100 years, was discovered in a Manchester boys home in April and is expected to sell for a record $1 million at Southeby's in New York on Oct. 25.

The highest auction price for any U.S. work of art was the $980,000 paid in July, 1977, at Southeby's in Los Angeles for George Caleb Bingham's Jolly Flotboatmen.

Landscape artist Church painted Icebergs in Labrador in 1861 after leaving his Connecticut home in 1859.

Icebergs was exhibited in New York when he returned and sent to England in 1863 where it won praise from London critics.

It was purchased by Thomas Watson on behalf of railway magnate Sir Edwin William Watkin.

The work remained for the next 100 years while the Watkin house became a convalescent home.

Don't insult the Duvaliers!

PORT-AU-PRINCE (AP) — The government invoked a new press law under which a journalist who insults President Jean-Claude Duvalier, his mother or other Haitian authorities can be jailed for up to three years, officials said Tuesday.

They said official identity cards will be issued to foreign and domestic journalists, and no news story may criticize Haiti's "popular culture," which the law does not define.

Thatcher under pressure to recognize Muzorewa

LONDON (AP) — Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher is under increasing pressure from members of her Conservative party to recognize the Zimbabwe-Rhodesia government of Bishop Abel Muzorewa.

The move is seen as a reaction to black guerrilla leaders' continued opposition to key provisions of the new constitution proposed by Britain for the breakaway African colony.

Foreign Secretary Lord Carrington, chairman of the Zimbabwe-Rhodesian peace conference, is in Blackpool today to report to the annual Conservative party conference.

Right-wing delegates to the conference are campaigning for recognition of the biracial government headed by Muzorewa, who has accepted the British draft constitution.

Carrington, after demanding that guerrilla leaders Joshua Nkomo and Robert Mugabe accept the British proposals without change by Monday, gave them an extension until Thursday when they refused to accept several key points.

But there is no indication that they will modify their position or their demand that the conference shelve the constitutional proposals and negotiate the composition and powers of a new government.

Muzorewa, having accepted the draft constitution, is demanding that the British government lift the diplomatic and economic sanctions imposed when his white predecessor, former prime minister Ian Smith, declared Rhodesia independent 14 years ago.

Because of the uncertain outlook for the peace talks, the Conservative convention has before it a bland motion saying the party looks forward to "full recognition by Her Majesty's Government of a multiracial government in Zimbabwe-Rhodesia."

But the right-wingers hope to amend this and have distributed lapel buttons reading "Lift Sanctions Now" and "Recognize Zimbabwe-Rhodesia."

Classified garbage

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — The U.S. Navy has admitted that one of its nuclear submarines accidentally dumped cannisters of classified documents into the sea, including the sub's operating schedules.

A navy spokesman said Tuesday the documents, plus some trash dumped by the attack submarine Shark, were recovered in August by two Long Island fishermen.

Vitamin C may thwart light-induced cataract

Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES — Vitamin C may help prevent a type of cataract that is believed to be caused by light, according to a Maryland eye researcher.

Light shining into the eyes can trigger a photochemical reaction that produces a chemical that has been shown to be damaging to the eye lens, said Dr. Shambhu D. Varma, director of Eye Research at the University of Maryland.

The experiments also disclosed that an adequate level of Vitamin C protects the lens from the toxic damage, Varma told a science writers seminar in ophthalmology here.

The fluids in the human eyes normally contain an exceptionally high level of Vitamin C — 30 to 50 times the level found in the blood, according to Varma.

The toxic substance Varma found to be damaging is superoxide, a breakdown product of oxygen. In his experiments he found that Vitamin C acts as a scavenger of superoxides.

Varma's work does not prove that superoxide causes cataracts, nor does it prove that Vitamin C protects against them in humans. But it does suggest a relationship between good nutrition, light and cataracts.

Other types of cataracts may be caused by diabetes, infections, senility, too much or too little oxygen, certain drugs and certain electromagnetic wavelengths.

Cataracts in diabetics, at least six times more common than in non-diabetics, are believed to be caused by an abnormally high level of sorbitol, a sugar, that accumulates in the eye.

Suicide blamed on mired talks

LONDON (Reuter) — A white Rhodesian lawyer who jumped to his death from the building where the Zimbabwe Rhodesia peace talks are taking place was frustrated by the slow progress of the talks, an inquest was told today.

The body of John Giles, a constitutional adviser to Zimbabwe Rhodesian Prime Minister Abel Muzorewa's delegation, was found in the garden of the Lancaster House conference centre last Wednesday.

Giles, 37, removed a small wooden barrier from the window of a top-floor conference room and jumped out, Westminister coroner Gavin Thurston said.

"I think he found a sense of frustration that things were being delayed," said Leslie Smith, secretary to the Zimbabwe Rhodesian cabinet.

"He thought he was putting in a lot of work that came to nothing."

The coroner recorded a verdict of suicide.

HOW TO WRITE A GOOD CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc., for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably by giving complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. Monday through Friday, 8:00 to 5:30 p.m. Saturday. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

The Lord is my Shepherd

I shall not want

He maketh me to lie down in green pastures

He restoreth my soul

He leadeth me in the path of righteousness for his name sake

Yea though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death

I will fear no evil

For thou art with me, thy rod and thy staff they comfort me

Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies

Thou anointest my head with oil

My cup runneth over

Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life and I will dwell in the House of the Lord forever.

'Fly United' to cost 22.5% more in '80

CHICAGO (AP) — United Airlines, the largest U.S. air carrier, will increase its fares by 22.5 per cent next year, bringing to 50 per cent the increases over a two-year period, an airline spokesman said Wednesday.

By the end of this year passengers will be paying 27.5-per-cent more than they were a year ago, spokesman Ed Williams said.

Soaring fuel prices was the main reason cited, and United expects the higher fares will depress business and result in the layoff of an undetermined number of its 55,000 employees.

United chairman Richard J. Ferris said in a letter to employees last week that fuel costs have increased this year by nearly $500 million. The price of fuel in August "shot up at twice the rate we had planned to 63 cents a gallon, and that the year-end price will be 84 cents," he said.

"In a two-year period we're going to see fuel go up 44 cents a gallon and each one-cent increase costs us approximately $20 million a year" — a jump of $880 million, he said. "If we proceed with the original 1980 schedule plan," Ferris said, "our fuel bill in 1980 would be $1 billion more than what we actually spent for fuel in 1978."

What it means, he said, is that "you're going to see dramatic increases in fares — in fact, fares are expected to rise by 50 per cent between January, 1979 and December, 1980. That means one thing — fewer people are going to fly."

James Kennedy, vice-president for corporate communications, said Tuesday that as of Oct. 1, the airline had reduced its daily flights to about 1,520 from 1,600, or by five per cent.

66-pound gold heist

ROME (AP) — Five bandits held up a jewel dealer and made off with 66 pounds of gold and gems the victim said are worth about $4.2 million, police reported today.

Police said the bandits broke into the apartment of Mordechai Fadlun, 44, and after tying up his wife and two children, took him to his office located near Saint Mary the Major Basilica.

Police said that the bandits forced Fadlun to open the safe where the gold and the jewels were kept.

Fadlun was born in Libya, a former Italian colony.

Air Canada wins Heathrow hassle

LONDON (Reuter) — Britain has dropped plans to force the national airlines of Canada, Spain and Portugal to switch operations from Heathrow, Europe's Busiest airport, to the smaller Gatwick airport, 40 kilometres south of London.

The government wanted the three airlines, Air Canada, Iberia and TAP, to move to Gatwick to ease overcrowding at Heathrow. All three airlines opposed the move.

Trade Secretary John Nott said Tuesday the government noted the emphasis Air Canada and British Airways placed on the technical problems in running scheduled service from Gatwick to the more distant points in Canada.

"It has decided therefore not to proceed further with the transfer of Canadian services from Heathrow to Gatwick," he said in a statement.

British Airways would move its scheduled Iberian flights to Gatwick from November 1980, subject to restrictions on further development of Iberia and TAP at Heathrow, Nott added.

This meant Iberia and TAP would limit their services at Heathrow to existing levels while any further expansion would have to go to Gatwick.

The minister said the Spanish government had accepted these proposals subject to certain details still being discussed, while talks were continuing with the Portuguese government.

Nott said that as an incentive to those airlines which transferred their operations to Gatwick, the policy which widened the gap between charges at the two airports would be maintained.

Several overseas airlines, including Braniff and Delta of the United States, the Scandinavian Air System (SAS), Avianca of Colombia and Air Lanka of Sri Lanka had recently begun flights from Gatwick, he added.

Nott said the practice of disallowing any new airlines setting up operations at Heathrow now was confirmed as government policy.

Stormy Sarah en route to 'Nam

It could not be determined how many boat people were in the path of the typhoon, which is packing winds of 150 kph.

Initial Red Cross reports said at least five children and a woman drowned in floods spawned by Sarah in the Philippines, where it circled erratically since Friday.

The storm destroyed a bridge, flattened homes and damaged crops in the sugar-producing Iloilo province in the central Philippines, but the extent of the storm's fury was not immediately known.

Jessie Zosa, Red Cross administrator in the western island of Palawan, cabled that 90 per cent of the residents of Taytay Town, a coastal town 450 kilometres from Manila, were homeless with 70 per cent of the town's buildings destroyed.

The typhoon did not prevent the U.S. Navy from continuing its "refugee locate flights."

Weathermen said a new typhoon, Tip, moved westward across the central Pacific today, but caused no injuries.

Molten gems in wreckage

ATHENS (UPI) — Industrial diamonds worth $2 million were destroyed in the fiery crash of the Swissair DC-8 jet whose pilot was charged with manslaughter in the deaths of 14 passengers.

Police found most of the uncut stones, bound for Bombay and other Far East destinations, by combing through the blackened wreckage of the plane, but they had been ruined by intense heat, an airport spokesman said today.

Diamonds, the hardest substance known to man, burn at 850 degrees Fahrenheit. The diamonds were insured by Lloyds of London.

The Swissair plane, flying from Zurich to Peking with stops at Athens and Bombay, Sunday skidded off a rain-slicked runway next to a golf course.

Most of the 142 passengers and all 12 of the crew escaped through emergency chutes as flames licked around the aircraft. But 14 passengers at the rear of the plane died in the blaze.

A Swissair spokesman said several of the dead had been identified but progress was slow because of the condition of the victims.

Several radioactive isotopes and a small quantity of plutonium recovered from the jetliner in heavy lead containers were being studied by experts from the Democritus nuclear research institute.

Nuclear experts said there was no radiation danger from the radioactive material, which had been destined for Peking.

GARDENING
Hilda Beastall

With the most brilliant fall foliage color just now is the Japanese Snowball-bush, Viburnum opulus sterile. This has developed before the greater mass of fall glory which will follow soon.

This quite commonly seen and well-known shrub has three seasons of interest, but the fall show is the most spectacular.

Young plants will of course not give a great display, but in a few years their full impact of scarlet foliage will perhaps be seen in the rising sunlight just after dawn breaks. Probably the same effect is enjoyed when seen from the west in the half hour before dusk, as the sun drops low on the horizon.

For the remainder of the day, the scarlet to dull-red tones show up well especially if green conifers are nearby.

I have an idea that this Viburnum opulus gives its best fall color when grown rather dry after it is well-established. Like all newly planted and young shrubs and trees, it needs summer watering to make growth and form the dense rounded shrub that gives results.

Mature shrubs seem to flower and color well even when neglected. The "snowballs" appear from the distance very much like Dogwood blossoms among the green leaves — a very pretty fancy if you can catch the illusion.

Also to be seen at nurseries and in gardens and parks as they add their fall color will be many other plants. It is really impossible to give names to all the colors, for shades depend to some extent on the soil and its mineral contents, amount of sun received, and water given during the past season.

High locations, sloping ground, valleys — each develops its own colors to full advantage. And even the same kinds of trees and shrubs will color differently within a group, than when growing on the outer edge of a group with full exposure on one side.

Well-known and loved for their flowers in spring and their fall coloring are the native Dogwoods. Not so well known are the several other species of Dogwoods which also give rich colors in fall. And the two forms of Smoke-bush, Cotinus coggygria which is green in summer and flame in fall; and the rich purple leaved Smoke-bush which is C.c. rubrifolius or perhaps the variety called Royal Purple — these and Spiraea prunifolia plena, a double flowered spiraea, and outstanding for fall coloring are of great interest in spring and summer.

Taller than any of the foregoing are Liquidambar styraciflua (Sweet-gum) and Pattotia persica which have been well planted during the past 30 years in the Victoria area. Each fall they add their long period of truly magnificent colors which run through pink to yellow, gold, scarlet, bronze, always with a few still bright green at the same time to create a tapestry effect.

And so I could go on, extravagantly praising the plants seen every year for their equally extravagant colorings. But for a beginning, look for the old favorite Snowball-bush and consider it for its fall color show.

Z-R pensions desegregated

SALISBURY (Reuter) — The Zimbabwe-Rhodesian parliament has abolished a national old age pension plan based on racial lines in the first major assertion of black power in the assembly.

The vote was 40-to-19 in favor of dropping the pension plan which benefitted only about 5,000 whites, people of mixed-races and Asians. Beginning next year, all races will be entitled to apply for the so-called compassionate allowance.

Korean fishboat Number 2 seized

JUNEAU (AP) — A second South Korean fishing vessel has been seized in the Bering Sea, less than 24 hours after the Seo Yang Ho was taken into custody for understating its catch, the U.S. Coast Guard said Tuesday.

En route to Kodiak under escort by the Coast Guard Cutter Jarvis was the Pung Yang Ho, which earlier had been boarded by agents of the National Marine Fisheries Service and coast guard officials about 120 kilometres miles northwest of Dutch Harbor.

Coast guard officials said the Pung Yang Ho had apparently underlogged its catch of pollock and Pacific cod by about 663.6 metric tons since Aug. 22.

On Monday, the coast guard announced it had seized the Seo Yang Ho for underlogging its catch by 770 metric tons.

Officials said the vessels are owned by the Korea Wong Yang Co. and home-ported at Pusan, South Korea.

Church fights fraud verdict

By PHILIP HAGER
Los Angeles Times

PORTLAND, Ore. — For the jurors, it was no ordinary fraud case. Instead, they found themselves listening to testimony about "bull baiting" and "fair game," much of it laced with terms like "Thetan," "PTSs" and "destimulation."

But after a month-long trial, the jurors believed that they understood enough to return a $2.1 million damage award in an unprecedented lawsuit against the Church of Scientology, brought by a former church member who contended that she was the victim of false promises and outrageous conduct.

The jury's award — almost all in the form of punitive damages — is being fought in court by the church. With support for some legal, academic and religious quarters, the church is contending that unless the verdict is overturned it will lead to a flurry of similar actions against religious organizations and an erosion of First Amendment freedoms.

On the other side, the lawyers who brought the legal action say there is no threat to religious freedom and that the issue is plain fraud, not religious practices or beliefs.

Our theory is simple," attorney Garry McMurry of Portland explains. "If you rig the bingo game in the church basement, you're liable for civil fraud, no matter how you wear your collar or what kind of robe you wear."

Both sides say that the case, now awaiting appeal, may well end up before the U.S. Supreme Court, focusing on the issue of when and how, if ever, a judge or jury can determine what is a religion and what are religious practices.

"This was the first time in 200 years in this country where a religion was called upon to prove its faith to a jury," said the Rev. Ken Hoden of Los Angelesx, national spokesman for the Scientologists. "Under that verdict, a disgruntled nun could bring a lawsuit, saying the Catholic church hadn't made good on its promises to make her happy and that her sex life was ruined."

The suit was initiated by Julie Christofferson Tichbourne, 22, who charged that she had suffered emotional damage as the result of the church's knowingly false promises to her in 1975 that it could help her with her college classwork, develop her creativity and raise her IQ.

She said she was told the church also had cures for neuroses, criminality, insanity, psychosomatic illness, homosexuality and drug dependence. She was lied to, she said, and induced to purchase assorted Scientology courses and services — which she did with money borrowed from friends.

The Church of Scientology denied her allegations, contending that she had turned against it as a result of being forcefully "deprogrammed" by relatives and other church foes and that whatever emotional problems she had were the result of the shock and stress of deprogramming.

The case went to trial in July and soon began to attract wide attention, not only as a sort of "religious consumer fraud" case but also because of the unusual nature of the church.

Scientology is regarded as an unconventional "new" religion, marked by its use of a quasitechnical jargon — terms such as "Thetan" (human spirit), "PTSs" (potential trouble sources) and "disconnect" (to sever ties with outsiders).

Its leaders describe it as a combination of eastern and western religious philosophies. The church claims membership of four million, mostly in the United States, with about 5,000 in Oregon. Its headquarters is in Sussex, England.

Recently, the church has found itself increasingly controversial. A group of its leaders, for example, face trial in Washington on charges of stealing thousands of government documents. The charges grew out of FBI raids on church facilities in Washington and Los Angeles, based on what authorities say was an admission by a church member of a church plot to infiltrate federal agencies.

At the trial, Mrs. Titchbourne's lawyers introduced a wide range of evidence and testimony to support their contention that the church was guilty not only of fraud but also of "outrageous conduct," a legal term for wrongful conduct that "shocks the conscience of society."

They attacked a Scientology practice called "fair game" and introduced a church policy letter, dated 1967, that read in part:

"Enemy, SP (suppressive person) Order. Fair Game. May be deprived of property or injured by any means by any Scientologist without any discipline of the Scientologist. May be tricked, sued or lied to or destroyed."

The defense countered that the policy had been widely misunderstood and had since been abandoned, but Mrs. Titchbourne's lawyers contended she was still threatened by church members practicing the "fair game" policy.

Also at issue was a Scientology training practice called "bull baiting." Mrs. Titchbourne's attorneys presented one witness who called the practice "horrifying," recalling that in one session she had observed, an 8-year-old boy repeatedly ran his hands up and down inside a woman's dress.

Church witnesses defended its courses and services as a means of providing for self-awareness and cleansing the mind. One church course supervisor testified that he had never seen one instance of sexual misconduct or heard abusive language.

In mid-August, the jury of seven women and five men returned its verdict in favor of Mrs. Titchbourne, finding, in effect, that the Scientology practices at issue were not religious in nature — and that its promises to her were false and that its conduct was outrageous.

Alarmed by the ramifications of the verdict, the church has since filed motions seeking to overturn the jury's finding or, alternatively, to obtain a new trial. It contends that the judgment was not supported by sufficient evidence and that Mrs. Titchbourne had failed to prove either fraud or outrageous conduct. The $2.1 million award, it says, was excessive.

A judge here is expected to rule on the church's motions by mid-month. The first steps then are expected in what could be a lengthy appeals process.

In the aftermath of the verdict, the church has marshaled support for its concern that the case could lead to an erosion of religious freedom. Hoden denounces the case as a "modern day Salem witch trial" and predicts, "It won't be long now before a Baptist or a Catholic will have to stand before a jury and try to prove their belief in Jesus Christ."

Charles Hinkle, a Portland lawyer and member of the national board of the American Civil Liberties Union, issued a statement saying that the present "effort against Scientology" is reminiscent of anti-Catholic sentiment in the 1920s in Oregon when voters approved a ban on parochial schools.

Stock market prices plunge as gold soars

Times News Services

Stock prices at the New York and Toronto exchanges dropped sharply in record trading today as the price of gold took another giant leap and the U.S. dollar dropped on European markets.

Early record New York Stock Exchange volume sent stocks broadly lower for the third straight session but some stocks recouped their earlier losses.

Trading was tumultuous as investors considered the impact of Federal Reserve Board moves which have sparked a surge in interest rates and worried about the possibility of a deep recession.

The closely watched Dow, down 17 points in the first 90 minutes, was off 24.83 points around 2 p.m. It's 26.45-point plunge Tuesday, the worst setback since a 26.99-point skid Jan. 9, 1974, put the Dow 40.02 points in the minus column for the first two days of the week.

The first two-hour volume of 37,530,000 shares eclipsed the previous record of 34,060,000 set Aug. 3, 1978. The first-hour volume of 20,730,000 shares also was a record.

The Big Board's full-day record was 66.3 million shares on Aug. 3, 1978.

The market's slide Monday and Tuesday was the worst since early January 1974 when OPEC raised oil prices in the wake of an Arab oil embargo.

The two-day setback this year and in 1974 were not as bad as the 68.90-point drop on Oct. 28 and Oct. 29, 1929. But the breadth of the market's decline so far this week stunned professional observers.

By 2 p.m. New York time today, 1,700 issues declined and only 57 advanced among the issues crossing the exchange tape. The exchange's high speed transaction ticker was running a record one hour late.

At Toronto, the stock market continued broad and sharp declines in heavy mid-afternoon trading.

The TSE 300 index plummeted 64.26 to 1,676.08, still reeling from increased interest rates Tuesday in Canada and the United States. All of the composite index's 14 units showed sharp declines.

Among the four most heavily-weighted groups, oil and gas issues fell 154.03 to Go-ahead on Minnie Mt.

The B.C. Court of Appeal in Vancouver this morning overturned a B.C. Supreme Court decision that had blocked Broadmead Farm's 70-acre Minnie Mountain housing development at Ten-Mile Point.

The decision was handed down in a 32-page document that allows Broadmead to continue with plans for the controversial development.

Mortgage rate at record high

Times News Services

Stiff increases in mortgage rates were announced today by two major Canadian lending institutions and other firms were expected to follow suit.

The move, following the increase Tuesday in bank interest rates to their highest-ever levels, was expected.

The Royal Bank of Canada set across-the-board increases in its residential rates, effective immediately.

All rates go up by one full percentage point except for that on one-year open conventional mortgages which goes up to 14 per cent from 13¼ percent.

For three-to-five year mortgage rates, the closed conventional rate goes to 13¾ per cent, with the NHA rate going to 13½ per cent. The open conventional rate rises to 14¼ per cent with the NHA rising to 14 per cent.

Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce announced an across-the-board increase of ¾ per cent, effective immediately.

For conventional three-and-five-year open mortgages, the Canadian Imperial rate now will be 13¾ per cent. The conventional three-year open rate and the one-year automatic renewal rate goes to 14 per cent.

Rates for National Housing Act mortgages go to 13¼ for the three- and five-year close and to 13¾ per cent for three-year open.

Hydro firm in land swap

LANGLEY (CP) — A sub sidiary of British Columbia Hydro, which supported the removal of 626 acres in this Fraser Valley community from the agricultural land reserve, will get about 80 acres of land.

Dave Robertson, spokesman for the Crown utility, confirmed Tuesday that the subsidiary, Columbia Estate Company Ltd., will get 80 acres in exchange for a nearby similar-sized parcel of land it owns.

The parcel, bought by Columbia in 1974, is still in the agricultural reserve and will not be as valuable as land that can be used for industrial purposes.

Robertson said Columbia is a wholly-owned subsidiary of Hydro. Its president is Hydro chairman Robert Bonner and its directors are Hydro officials.

He said the original 80 acres was acquired in a "favorable deal" with Gloucester Properties Ltd., the company which persuaded the provincial cabinet's Environment and Land Committee to release the 626 acres from the reserve after its application to free the land for industrial use was turned down by the B.C. Land Commission.

Robinson said Hydro supported Gloucester's application to the cabinet committee, but he denied allegations that Hydro support was contingent on the 80-acre swap.

"Our support was not contingent on the transfer," he said. "We had always supported it (industrial use for the land) because we felt it was a good idea to have that land developed for industrial purposes."

Gloucester told Hydro that if it could get the land out of the reserve, Hydro could develop about 80 acres adjacent to its Fraser Valley railway which runs through the property. B.C. Hydro Railway has a main line running from New Westminster to Chilliwack with access to downtown Vancouver on tracks leased from CP Rail.

Pickets shut ferries HQ

Pickets also hit ferry service to Powell River and the Vancouver ferry information office.

Mediator Fred Geddes has invited both sides back to the bargaining table but as of noon, no talks were scheduled and the union said it would continue its rotating strikes.

Thursday, a picket line will halt service on the Horseshoe Bay-Nanaimo run and a study session will pevent the Queen of Prince Rupert from operating on the Swartz Bay-Tsawwassen route.

On Friday, service between Swartz Bay and Tsawwassen will be halted by a picket line and the maintenance yard at Tsawwassen will also be struck.

Meanwhile, Lloyd Thornhill, the man who called for a full-scale unauthorized strike, has been removed from the union negotiating team in a showdown with president Shirley Mathieson.

Thornhill said a majority of the 2,700-member B.C. Ferry and Marine Workers Union want to escalate picketing activity beyond the executive-endorsed rotating strike strategy.

The union executive rejected the proposal because of the chance negotiations might resume through the mediator.

Thornhill later said Mathieson told him there was a unanimous vote to relieve him of his duties on the 11-member team.

The decision to stay with rotating strikes is a move apparently designed to avoid the confrontation that might result if workers went on a full strike and the government invoked essential services legislation as it did two years ago.

"It's hovering over your head all the time," said one ferry worker. "You can never forget that it's there."

B.C. gasfield looks a winner

Wainoco Oil and Gas Ltd. says it has drilled into a natural gas reservoir that contains an estimated 35 billion cubic feet of gas.

However, it's possible the discovery could yield as much as 300 billion cubic feet in total reserves, said Don Rawlyk, manager of B.C. Petroleum Corp.

"It's a large structure; it could be the tip of the iceberg," he said.

Testing on the discovery well produced gas at a rate of 30 million cubic feet a day from several zones, said Dennis Bacon, manager of Wainoco's Canadian division.

And the company plans to drill more wells in the next year to further substantiate the find.

"It's a pretty good find for that area," said Bacon. "Our operator says it's the best well he's ever seen."

The well was drilled to a depth of about 6,000 metres and encountered three producing areas totalling about 75 metres in thickness.

Two more wells are being drilled in the same area in conjunction with other oil companies and Bacon said another two wells likely will be drilled in the region.

Wainoco, a Houston-based company with offices in Calgary, will spend $25 million on B.C. drilling programs by the end of the year. In a land sale Oct. 3, it paid $6.9 million for leases in the area.

Natural gas reserves in the province stood at 7.1 trillion cubic feet at the end of 1978.

Baby mauled, puppy to live

TORONTO (CP) — A puppy that severely mauled a two-week-old baby has no concept of viciousness and will not be destroyed, says the Ontario Humane Society's executive director.

Tom Hughes said Tuesday that a full inquiry must be held into the "terrible tragedy," in which the infant lost both her ears and faces amputation of a finger.

But he said: "This is one dog I am not going to see killed.

"I can't believe that a six-week-old puppy has any concept of what it is doing. It can't be vicious in any concept of the term."

Peel Regional Police said the mongrel puppy attacked Amy Anicic early Saturday when she rolled off a couch in her family's home in Mississauga, just west of Toronto.

Theresa Anicic, 22, who had just brought Amy home from a maternity ward, had dozed off after feeding the baby and did not wake when the dog came in and mauled the child, police said.

In addition to her other injuries, Amy suffered cuts to the face, arms and scalp. Doctors at Toronto's Hospital for Sick Children, where the baby was in serious but stable condition today, managed to save one of the child's eyes .

MD tells why he advised abortion

The director of medicine at the Glendale Lodge told an inquest today he felt a 32-year-old severely retarded woman was emotionally incapable of handling a pregnancy and live birth.

For this reason, Dr. John Kenneth Martin said, he recommended to the Victoria General Hospital sterilization committee that the woman's pregnancy be terminated and that she be sterilized.

Martin was testifying at an inquest into the death of the woman's child, a baby boy, who died 10 hours after being born by caesarean section Sept. 18, 1978.

He told the inquest the woman's mother agreed with his views and was adamant that the pregnancy be terminated.

Martin described the woman as having a mental age of 3.3 years and said the father of the child remains unknown.

Dr. Martin testified he did not detect the pregnancy until the last week of August.

He said he examined the woman on June 16 and found nothing untoward at that time.

He said she was prone to an irregular menstrual pattern.

He said the woman was on a mixed ward with 20 other severely retarded patients, two of who, he felt, were potentially capable of fathering the child.

He said if the father was among the patients, the chances of the baby being normal were slightly over 50 per cent.

Martin's statements were made in response to questions from regional crown counsel Wally Anderson.

The inquest, called by McArthur because the death was classed as unnatural, was marked by several unusual features as it opened.

The jurors, selected from a 23-member jury panel, were challenged by McArthur as to their beliefs on abortion and pro life issues and no sooner had the jury been picked than Vancouver lawyer A.D. Thackray asked for an adjournment.

Thackray represents doctors M.W. Rippington, K.H. Chan, J.M. Dickout, M.J. Penn and Martin who are to be called as witnesses in the case.

City sues for back taxes

Under a new hardline policy against delinquent taxpayers, Victoria has initiated court action to force payment of more than $300,000 in 1979 property taxes and penalties from a number of developers.

City solicitor Jakob de Villiers filed suit in B.C. Supreme Court Tuesday against seven firms which did not pay their taxes at the June 30 deadline this year.

The largest amount — in taxes and penalties — is $79,685.13 owed by Fort Victoria Properties Ltd. Next in size is $67,886.85 owed by Abacus Cities Ltd., the owner of Market Square and other properties which recently went into receivership.

Concord Credit Ltd. is being sued for $50,333.75 and Ponteix Properties Ltd. for a total of $45,354.23. Other companies involved are Victoria Park Place Ltd. for $27,273.21, Vista Homes Ltd. for $25,199.44 and Roanne Properties Ltd. for $25,221.69.

Council authorized de Villiers last week to pursue delinquent taxpayers, down to a minimum of $2,000 owed. He said the seven cited in documents filed with the court registry on Tuesday are the first to be prosecuted under the policy.

There are others to come, but he didn't want to comment on details.

3,265.72, metals and minerals 67.01 to 1,515.19, financial services 36.81 to 1,209.11 and industrial products 38.81 to 1,209.11.

Among the other 10 groups, real estate and construction issues were weakest, falling 303.59 to 4,151.57.

Volume of trading at 2 p.m. was 7.47 million shares compared with 5.58 million at the same time Tuesday.

Declines led advances 521 to 49, with 126 issues unchanged.

The index plunged 64.37 to 1,740.30 Tuesday, its steepest drop since the new composite was introduced at the beginning of 1976.

Gold prices catapulted by a record $25 overnight to $414.50 in Zurich from $389.50. In London it jumped $18.50 from $391.50 to $410 and rapidly advanced to $420 in dealing ahead of the morning gold fix.

The latest advances followed big increases in the gold price Tuesday. Since Monday night's closing price gold gained $45.50 in London and $42 in Zurich.

Dealers in Switzerland said the overnight jump was in line with overnight activity in New York. Speculation about high bids at today's gold auction in the United States and growing fears of further hikes in the price of crude oil spurred the market on, the dealers said.

The sudden about-turn in the price follows an equally dramatic slide last week after gold reached a record $438 an ounce. London dealers said heavy buying from the Middle East contributed to Tuesday's boost.

At the morning fixing in London the gold price came off the boil to fix at $409.25, still a gain of $17.75 on Tuesday's closing price, and by mid-morning dealers reported speculators were selling out for quick profit.

"With the dollar shaky gold went higher at the opening but has since come back slightly," said a dealer at Mocatta and Goldsmid.

On the foreign exchange markets the U.S. dollar was substantially weaker. In New York, the Canadian dollar was up 1-50 at $0.8522.

In Ottawa, meanwhile, hints surfaced that Finance Minister John Crosbie may have serious questions about the high-interest-rate economic path on which the government is embarked.

In an off-the-cuff comment to reporters Tuesday, he mentioned that one of the frustrating things about raising the bank rate is that it does not seem to deter Canadians from borrowing money and buying on credit.

Crosbie said raising interest rates no longer seems to have the desired effect on the buying public. Fifteen or 20 years ago, a bank rate increase gave consumers a compelling reason to reassess their borrowing plans.

Pair accused of murder escape police

MONTREAL (CP) — Police spread a dragnet over the city's west side for accused police murderers Pierre and Michel Renaud, who escaped custody this morning while being transported to court.

Hydro in land swap

bia's main role is to bank and develop land for rail-oriented industry. It has established a number of industrial parks in Richmond, Burnaby, Surrey and on Annacis Island in the Fraser River.

Although the land committee has approved release of the land, zoning and reginal district designations still have to be changed.

The municipality of Langley earlier supported the application to the cabinet, but the regional district was opposed to changing the designation from Rural 2, the classification for upland rural areas which are free from flooding.

Langley cannot rezone the area unless the regional district first changes the classification.

Meanwhile Highways Minister Alex Fraser said the committee decided to remove the land from the reserve because it has never been farmed to any degree and has drainage problems.

"We have confidence in the land commission, but that doesn't mean we have to agree with every decision they have made," he said.

Fraser denied charges that Hydro and Gloucester made a special deal whereby Hydro would put pressure on the cabinet to approve Gloucester's request.

He confirmed that Hydro sent letters to the committee requesting the land be taken out of the reserve, but he said Hydro was entitled to express an opinion.

The Weather

A frontal system lingering over the north coast brought some rain overnight to that region and portions of the central interior. A high pressure area over southern B.C. will remain through Thursday and extend its influence to northern regions. No significant break in the unusual warm spell is seen for the next few days over southern regions.

"Since we got our JCBs our production has doubled!"

The verdict: "nothing can compare with them for versatility and production". The result: doubled production. The reason: heavy-duty quality and precision engineering with more factory-built attachments than any other machine in their class.

There's almost no end to the ways these JCB machines can turn a profit for you. Choose from a range of loader buckets, excavator buckets, jaws and bulldozer blades; give yourself more can-do capability with a multi-purpose clam-shovel, fork lift, roadbreaker, ripper tooth, extending dipper, backfill blade, jib crane, square hole bucket, ditching bucket or bucket fork lift. You get virtually full fleet productivity for the price of a single machine.

And versatility is only part of the story. These are rugged machines, built around a tough, rigid, one-piece integral steel frame. They give you narrow-space manoeuverability, high breakout force, better hydraulics, and advanced operator comfort and visibility . . . all backed by Finning service and parts availability, no matter where you're working.

Raising the zoning category could boost former museum's value to over $1 million

Saanich got buy in Maltwood deal

By AB KENT

Saanich will be getting a real estate bargain if it goes through with an undertaking to buy the former Maltwood Art Museum at Royal Oak from the University of Victoria.

The municipality and university have agreed to a purchase price of $375,000 for the 30-year-old replica of a Tudor hall house and 7.7 acres of land willed to UVic with the Maltwood collection of fine art in 1964.

According to a university administrative source the price is slightly below the appraised value for the parcel about three years ago, which was then $385,000. But he also said today's value on the open market might be more like $500,000.

It is estimated commercial property in Royal Oak could sell anywhere from $3 to about $7 a square foot, based on current real estate appraisal, and that could boost the value of the Maltwood estate over $1 million.

The Thatch, as the novel building is known, was built in 1939 as a restaurant but for years was the home of John and Katharine Maltwood, who filled it with fine art objects from around the world. It lies in a key location between Patricia Bay Highway and West Saanich Road, on the doorstep of urban Victoria.

Its contents, including some notable sculptures by Katharine Maltwood, are now housed in the recently completed Maltwood Art Museum at University Centre.

Critics are suggesting the university is abandoning the terms of the Maltwood legacy, and that Saanich, by not paying the full value of the property is in a position to profit by the resale of the land. If the land must be sold the Maltwood art collection should be the full beneficiary, without Saanich taking advantage, some think.

When the property was appraised it was zoned as civic institutional land, a designation that Saanich council intends to alter to C2 commercial. When that is done, and the university, for its part removes any restrictive covenants from the title, the deal will be closed for $375,000, said Mayor Mel Couvelier.

By raising the zoning category Saanich will be increasing the value of the property, the undeveloped parts of which will probably be sold. But the Tudor hall itself will remain intact in some role, Couvelier said.

"It will be declared a heritage structure because of its uniqueness," he said.

Because it has to be utilized it will have to fill some commercial purpose, he felt, perhaps once again as the restaurant it was originally designed to be, or a neighborhood pub.

"We don't have one in Saanich and it would seem suited to that," he said.

When the transaction is completed, Couvelier said the municipality will advertise for proposals for use of the 14th century style English hall.

The mayor said the C2 zoning would allow for the widest possible use of the site, but it is not intended to make that a permanent category. Only when the end use is decided will the appropriate zoning be adopted.

He also said he feels the undeveloped parcel adjoining the house should be sold to cover some of the cost of acquisition, perhaps for housing.

"The best thing I've seen so far is some kind of senior citizens housing accommodation."

Public proposals will be sought for this land, too, he said.

Trevor Matthews, UVic dean of administration, said Saanich wants to buy the property only with clear title and the university had agreed to remove any impediments. As far as UVic is concerned, he said, the principal obligation was to the art collection and that had been met with the new museum on campus.

By the terms of bequest the Maltwood home was to be maintained, used and operated by the university for the viewing and study of art. But the will provided for the sale of adjoining land for the benefit of the museum.

A court ruling relieved the university from maintaining the house, provided the proceeds went into the Maltwood trust.

While it was housed in the Thatch, the collection was subject to destructive moisture and temperature and paintings, tapestries and carpets had begun to deteriorate. A shake roof replacing the original straw thatch failed to solve the problem. Some works had to be sent to Japan for repairs and restoration.

A permanent place where the works of art may be properly cared for in controlled conditions has been achieved.

"We weren't able to before and now we are doing an excellent job," Matthews said.

It is intended that the proceeds of the sale of property will be added to the original $200,000 Maltwood trust for the perpetual care of the collection, including a curator.

UVic has been caring for the art for 15 years using income from the trust. With the additional money it may become possible to augment the collection, Matthews said.

Meanwhile, in its new home, the Maltwood collection is getting better exposure than it had in the Thatch. In the past year, with the proximity of University Centre auditorium, it has been seen by more people than visited the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria.

Max Low

Okay, all you gluttons who, as I did, gorged yourselves on far too much Thanksgiving Day turkey and trimmings. You put on a few more pounds and got even further out of shape, didn't you?

Well, I have just the antidote for you. It's the Crystal Fitness Assessment Program.

First, you go to the Crystal Pool and put your name down for their new fitness test. You'll then do the test privately and receive from the examiner a full and confidential report on your condition plus a personal exercise prescription. In other words, a list of the things you should do to put yourself into shape.

I can afford to be reasonably smug about all this as I took the test the other day (before the turkey) and did very well. In fact, in the section of the test labelled Stature (all your vital statistics including weight and percentage of body fat) my percentile score was 97, which means that only three per cent of Canadian males my age are in better condition.

In stamina, too, I scored highly after marching up and down stairs while plugged in to an electrocardiograph for three three-minute sessions at increasing speeds. I got a percentile of 96 in that one and examiner Denis Smith, who runs the Crystal's Fitness Program, was quite ecstatic, calling my stamina "excellent" and stature "ideal."

"Your existing diet and activity pattern are doing very well for you and you should maintain both at their present level," he advised.

Since my activity pattern consists mainly of regularly chasing three rapidly growing children around, it would probably be quite difficult right now not to maintain it.

However I must confess that while I did rate an 81 score in Suppleness (tests of bending in various directions like a tree in the wind), I didn't do too well in the fourth S of fitness — Strength.

I've never been much of a power handshaker and my performance with the dynamometer used to measure grip strength was below average with a mere 42 percentile score.

Situps and pushups were other embarrassments. I could perform just 24 situps in 60 seconds for a percentile score of 45 (only to arrive home and find my 10-year-old can do 35 in the same time!) and, coming at the tail end of everything, I could manage only 13 pushups no matter how much time they gave me. And the percentile score for those was a measly 35.

Oh well, I did do well in the stamina class and was comforted by Smith's words that stamina was the most important fitness component.

The test, which takes just over an hour and costs $15, is a lot of fun.

Of course, whether you act on the examiner's advide or just recoil in horror when confronted with the results of your test is up to you. There is an exercise prescription given, though, and you can follow this for three months and then undergo the test again (this time for $10) to see if you're in any better shape.

Although it's something new, quite a few have already taken the test which, like the popular Employee Fitness Program, is helping to turn the revamped Crystal Pool into far more of a people place.

Once criticized as a cold (both the water and atmosphere) and impersonal kind of place and called Victoria's white elephant, the Crystal underwent changes a year ago that saw the addition of a whirlpool, saunas and an exercise gym.

But the biggest changes were probably in the attitude of the staff toward fitness and toward people.

Denis, who is 29 and going for his master of arts degree in physical education at UVic, was employed as fitness program co-ordinator. Down came the ugly turnstyles at the main door and people were made to feel more welcome.

"Manager Bill Young has done a great job," Denis said as we chatted over coffee after my test. "A lot of his initiative has gone into getting this whole fitness thing going. He realized fitness was happening and that we should be a part of it."

And a little while later, I left the Crystal feeling quite good in the knowledge that most of me was up to scratch. But I tell you, after all that walking up and down the steps to the throb of music while gazing out at the trees in Central Park, it took me some time before I could stop saying "Up, two, three; down, two, three" while navigating the stairs back at work!

Acupuncturist held high hand in treating gambling addict

By ROGER STONEBANKS

A Victoria medical doctor and acupuncturist told county court Tuesday he has had a success rate of more than 90 per cent in treating almost 2,000 persons with addictions and compulsions during the last two years.

Dr. Molino Yam said he doesn't know of acupuncture being used elsewhere in this fashion and that the treatment appeared to be exclusively his.

He was testifying during sentencing proceedings of Walter James Larocque, 35, a compulsive gambler since childhood who pleaded guilty to breaking and entering with intent to commit an indictable offence at a Fisgard Street apartment on May 18 and to theft of $370, which was recovered, from the Chinese Village Restaurant Oct. 20, 1978.

Yam, who is licensed by the B.C. College of Physicians and Surgeons to practise acupuncture in addition to his general medical practice, said he has used acupuncture to treat people with compulsive behavior such as drug addiction, alcoholism and gambling.

He said Larocque came to him in June and he gave him five treatments and another treatment this month. He had responsed exceptionally well.

It was not clear scientifically why acupuncture cures compulsion, he said.

But the body produces a morphine-type substance which is used in times of stress. In stressful conditions, the body needs more of this substance and acupuncture stimulates regeneration of the substance so that a compulsive person is able to cope with stress instead of substituing something like cigarettes, drugs, alcohol, gambling or nail biting.

Defence counsel Chris Considine said Larocque works full-time, has a family and has just bought a house. Both offences arose from the need to raise money for gambling.

He said Larocque's rehabilitation should be uppermost in the court's mind and the success rate with acupuncture should be taken into consideration.

Judge Montague Drake said it was clear the interests of society were best served if he continued the rehabilitation he had largely brought about himself.

The compulsion to gamble was the cause of the present offences and that appeared to be well on the way to being taken care of, he said.

Larocque, who has numerous convictions for similar offences, was given 60 days in jail, to be served on weekends "so you can keep your job," plus one year's probation with the condition that he continue acupuncture treatment.

Sun stays in the strike zone

The weather has thrown us a curve, which is good news for Victoria and bad news for Ontario.

The present airflow over Victoria is from the southwest, bringing a California-type weather pattern to this area.

But as the winds move across the Prairies, they are curving and by the time they reach Ontario the flow is from the cold north.

The result Tuesday was record high temperatures here and record low temperatures — and snow — in Toronto and Ottawa.

The present pattern should continue for the rest of the week.

On Tuesday Victoria's temperature hit 21.5 Celsius, breaking the former Oct. 9 record of 20.6.

Ask the Times

Q. Is the recent $130,616 B.C. Supreme Court jury award in Victoria to a Duncan father of two whose wife was killed in a traffic accident the first of its kind? J.B.

A. No. But it is believed to be the highest award in this kind of case in Canada. Most of the award, $109,346 for the husband-father, was for "loss of benefits, services and advantages" because she was a full-time mother and housewife.

Mother files complaint

The mother of a 15-year-old girl held in a city police cell after receiving a skull fracture in a bicycle spill just before her arrest has lodged an official complaint.

Chief Jack Gregory said today he received the complaint last week and will attempt to resolve the problems informally.

He said a meeting will be held with the mother and officers and jail staff concerned but could not give a date because one of the arresting officers is on holidays until Oct. 25.

Meanwhile, the Times has learned human resources officials have also submitted complaints, one from the girl's social worker and another from the office of the regional manager for the Victoria area.

It is also understood the ministry is seeking legal representation for the girl in the event an inquiry or civil action arises out of the incident.

The girl's mother said in an interview today she is unhappy with the way police have handled her complaint.

She said when she went to the station last week officers "just gave me the run-around . . . they wouldn't give any straight answers."

She said she was denied access to the booking book to see what statements were recorded at the time her daughter was brought in to jail.

Under the Police Act, a complainant may try to resolve a problem informally with the chief or officers. The case may be taken to the police board and a public inquiry requested.

Rain delay won't alter team lineups

BALTIMORE (AP) — The 1979 World Series still was tied 0-0 today because not even baseball's annual fall classic can fool around with Mother Nature.

It rained on the scheduled Tuesday night opener of the best-of-seven game confrontation between Baltimore Orioles and Pittsburgh Pirates.

It marked the first time in the 76-year history of the Series that the opener was postponed.

Baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn called off the game at 8:32 p.m., just two minutes after the scheduled starting time. The decision was booed by the fans, but justified by the continuing downpour and dire weather forecast.

There was no way the American League champion Orioles and National League winning Pirates could have played on the sopping wet natural grass and dirt surface. Although a tarpaulin covered the infield, the outfield was full of puddles.

The forecast for tonight was for clear skies.

As a result the Orioles and Pirates will forego their travel day Thursday.

The Series opens tonight and continues Thursday night. Third game will be in Pittsburgh Friday night. The fourth game is scheduled for Pittsburgh Saturday afternoon.

Managers Earl Weaver of the Orioles and Chuck Tanner of the Pirates, said the rainout would not affect their lineups for the delayed opener.

Weaver said Mike Flanagan, whose 23 victories led the majors during the regular season, still would open for the Orioles. Weaver also held to his plan to use Mark Belanger at shortstop for more defensive strength.

Weaver went so far as to name his starting pitchers for the next three games — Jim Palmer, Scott McGregor and Dennis Martinez. Tanner had disclosed he would use Bert Blyleven and John Candelaria in the next two games.

Tanner said that if Flanagan was the Orioles' starter tonight, he would stick with Bill Robinson in leftfield and rookie Steve Nicosia behind the plate. Both swing from the right side and hopefully would make the Pirates more effective against the left-handed Flanagan.

Weaver and Orioles' fans still were concerned about how the non-use of the American League designated hitter rule in the Series would affect Baltimore.

Weaver expects it to make a difference since he will have to let his pitchers bat instead of Lee May, the club's designated hitter who hit 19 home runs and had 69 RBI.

Flanagan hasn't batted since he was in the minor leagues three years ago. Kison had eight hits and drove in six runs, including four with a grand slam during the regular season.

Flanagan was 23-9 with a 2.65 ERA in the regular American League season and is one of the leading candidates for the Cy Young Award as his league's top pitcher.

Kison was 13-7, with a 3.14 ERA, including a 4-0 mark during the Pirates' September drive to the NL East title. He did not pitch in Pittsburgh's three-game sweep in the league championship series against Cincinnati.

The game will be televised over Channels 2, 3, 4, and 6 starting at 5:30 p.m. PDT.

Blues shock Canucks; Unger signs for Flames

Times News Services

St. Louis Blues didn't miss Garry Unger at all Tuesday night as they used superior skating to create scoring chances and easily defeat Vancouver Canucks 5-2 at Vancouver's Pacific Coliseum in the opening game of the 1979-80 National Hockey League season.

Unger missed his first start after playing in 833 consecutive games, the all-time NHL record, after playing out his option and shopping his services. But he will be able to resume the string tonight as he signed with Atlanta Flames early this morning.

A spokesman for the Flames in Atlanta confirmed that Unger and Flames general manager Cliff Fletcher had reached an agreement at a hotel near Montreal early today and that the veteran centre would be in an Atlanta uniform tonight when the team opens its NHL season in Quebec City.

The youthful Blues got a good effort from goaltender Ed Staniowski and their penalty-killers as they took period leads of 2-0 and 3-1 in their impressive win over the disorganized Canucks.

"It was a good effort by everyone, but especially by the goaltender and the penalty-killers," said coach Barclay Plager of the Blues. "We're a skating team and we created two of our goals by skating and being in good position in their end."

St. Louis got goals from rookie Bob Crawford, Blake Dunlop, Wayne Babych, Brian Sutter and Hartland Monahan as the Blues took advantage of the few good scoring opportunities they got. Monahan's goal was into an empty net.

The Canucks had nine power plays against the aggressive Blues, but many times didn't even get a shot on goal as they tended to overpass instead of taking the obvious shots. On other occasions, Staniowski was able to smother the puck in close when Vancouver shooters failed to get their shots up high.

Vancouver goal scorers were defenceman Lars Lindgrem and opportunistic winger Ron Sedlbauer as the Canucks outshot St. Louis 25-22 after a horrid first period.

The Canucks played without captain Don Lever, who was sitting out a one-game suspension imposed by the league after being detected as the first player off the bench Oct. 6 in Colorado during a brawl.

Vancouver also lost defenceman John Hughes after the first period when he reinjured his ankle while blocking a shot. Hughes also was involved in two of the four fights during the game.

Unger, a 32-year-old Edmonton native, played out the option year of his contract with St. Louis Blues last year and became a free agent June 1. Since the deal was completed before the Flames opened their 1979-80 campaign, Unger's NHL record of 883 consecutive games will be extended tonight at Quebec City.

The Flames gave up veteran defenceman Ed Kea, centre Red Laurence and a second-round pick in the 1981 amateur draft as compensation.

Unger had eight consecutive 30-goal seasons behind him, third behind Bobby Hull (13) and Phil Esposito (12). In 12 NHL campaigns between Toronto Maple Leafs, Detroit Red Wings and St. Louis, he scored 377 goals — 17th in career totals — and collected 352 assists.

With the high-powered Flames, who were surprising preliminary round victims of Toronto in the 1978-79 playoffs, Unger is the 10th forward to score 20 or more goals last year.

Mulitplex isn't for those who live near the PNE

Multiplex, whatever and wherever? Those are the questions of the moment. Vancouver's Stadium of the future is literally on the line.

And it was on the line, the hot line, on the weekend, as a casual Thanksgiving day tourist noticed. Stadium trouble shooter Paul Mannning was the guest on an afternoon talk show and, if you don't think this is a hot issue in Vancouver, think again.

The Vancouver folk, and all of B.C. for that matter, have been asked for input on the stadium and some of them heard.

Manning was told more than once where he could put the Stadium, and one place, more than once, where he couldn't put it.

The trouble spot if you're a Multiplex man is that very area where Empire Stadium is located right now . . . the Pacific National Exhibition grounds.

Multiplex briefly is the Erwin Swangard plan for a super stadium on the PNE grounds, tied in with the PNE, which would house football, soccer, et al, but no baseball, and would have many other amenities that go with an exhibition facility.

But the residents of that area want no part of it. They are having trouble enough with traffic, are highly organized, have launched their attack well, and have been getting swift action on their complaints.

No parking signs on side streets, except for residents, have been the in-thing in the immediate area adjoining the PNE grounds for some time. Now there is a no-access campaign in full swing. Residents, east of Cassiar, the main north-south highway adjoining their homes on one side and the PNE grounds on the other, have had access to those side roads barricaded off to traffic coming from the North Shore.

The spinoff, by design or otherwise, as obviously all the talk of Multiplex has had its effect, is that people leaving the PNE grounds also cannot take the short way home. The residents simply don't want cars whizzing up their streets from Cassiar during the day or football fans, soccer fans or anybody from the PNE grounds roaring up those streets late at night.

One of these, the Cambridge Street overpass, was near a main exit from the PNE. This was one of the better escape routes from the Stadium. Until yesterday, it had been barricaded, making it a treacherous manouevre trying to get on Cassiar. But the provincial government recognized this and ordered it re-opened.

These are basically the same people who don't want Multiplex for the same reasons. They don't want their traffic problem compounded. And on the air they were ready to quote survey after survey on traffic, population, the whole bit, and that will be part of their official submission.

Coquitlam and Burnaby got some votes for a stadium, because those municipalities have land, lots of land. But the downtown group seemed to get the most marks, simply because that plan was simpler and the area closer to the action. Whether it's feasible or not is what Manning hopes to answer.

Basically, the down-towners have been pressing for an all-purpose stadium in the False Creek area without the frills of Multiplex. The idea is that a downtown site would better serve the big city syndrome. A downtown visitor, or worker, for example, would have time for socializing, dinner, a ball game and perhaps some night life without driving to Coquitlam and back.

The regular or occasional fan appeared to be divided between downtown and Burnaby, with Burnaby getting the nod over Coquitlam for an out-of-town stadium because of its more central location. The downtowners pointed to Seattle's Kingdome as their example in point.

It was also the majority opinion that baseball should be a part of a stadium.

But what is big brother prepared to do to help?

A good point, because any stadium will have to have the backing of the provincial government and also the feds. Sure, the provincial government is interested. It has to be. It must approve anything and Premier Bill Bennett probably did the right thing by appointing someone (Manning) to look into the whole affair and report back.

There has been talk about $25 million being available from B.C. for the project. If that's just a teaser, it's still more than the feds have promised.

When Iona Campagnola was the big wheel for the Liberals, she promised something like $35 million for a new PNE Stadium complex. But she has since disappeared and so has the $35 million. For when the present Fitness and Amateur Sport Minister Steve Paproski was asked what his contribution might be, he said none.

That could change. But those nearby the PNE won't.

Tigers clip Blades

MEDICINE HAT (CP) — Kevin Ginnell scored a power-play goal at 5:24 of overtime to lift Medicine Hat Tigers to a 5-4 win over Saskatoon Blades in the lone Western Hockey League game Tuesday night.

First-period goals by Tim Leier, up from the Battlefords Barons of the Saskatchewan Junior Hockey League for the game, Stewart Robertson and Steve Tsujuira gave Tigers a 3-0 lead. Tsujuira added his second goal of the night in the third period.

Mark LeClair and Blake Stephen scored for the Blades in the second period and Dan Bent and Bob Black scored in the third. Black's goal at 17:06 of the third period sent the game into overtime.

Americans in front despite chilly gym

EDMONTON (CP) — Kurt Thomas was tired and cold and the chill bothered Rhonda Schwandt's bad knees.

But both managed to stay warm enough to finish as the top individual performers Tuesday night and put the United States in a commanding position to make a clean sweep of the first Pacific gymnastics championships.

Tuesday night's competition, the fourth in a five-stop championship tour that began in Honolulu Oct. 1 and ends in Vancouver Thursday night, was held in the Edmonton Coliseum on an ice hockey rink covered with sheets of plywood.

"I'm not used to cold gyms," Thomas said, insisting he wasn't happy with anything he had done during the night even though he was the top male competitor.

The Florida native compiled a total of 57.20 points in six individual events — vault, floor exercises, pommel horse, rings, parallel bars and high bar — to wind up a shade ahead of Philip Delesalle of Victoria.

Delesalle, competing for the first time since August while he sorted out some "psychological problems," collected 56.65 points. He would have been even closer to Thomas but for what he described as a "dumb" mistake — he stepped out of bounds during the floor exercises and it cost him four-tenths of a point.

Japan took the team title for the night with 113.90 points to 113.75 for the U.S. and 110.55 for third-place Canada. The other Canadian men, Allan Reddon of Edmonton and Brad Peters of Brampton, Ont., finished 10th and 11th respectively.

In the over-all championship standings, Thomas was the top male competitor with 230.60 points, comfortably ahead of Toshiro Kanai of Japan 225.25.

It was a little closer in the over-all men's team standings, where the U.S. had 457.70 points, Japan 453.50, the People's Republic of China, competing internationally for the first time, 445.75 and Canada 439.80.

Schwandt said the cold resulted in stiff mats — "it's harder when you land" — and caused some discomfort in her knees. She had surgery on her right knee in February and has bruised ligaments in her left.

But Schwandt still managed to corral women's individual honors with 37.90 total points in four events — vault, uneven parallel bars, balance beam and floor exercises.

But the U.S. women's team had to settle for second place behind China on the night's competition. The Chinese girls, Zhao Xuegin, Chen Hung and Zhou Xinping, collected 75.75 points to 75.55 for the U.S. and 72.70 by the Canadian trio of Elfi Schlegel, Karen Goold and Bonnie Wittmeier.

Individually, Xueqin placed second with 37.85 points, Hung third with 37.65 and Xinping sixth with 37.25.

Suzy Kelluns and Christa Canary, Schwandt's U.S. team-mates, tied for fourth place with 37.35 points. Schlegel, from Toronto, was seventh with 36.30, Goold, from Mississauga, Ont., 10th and Wittmeier, from Winnipeg, 14th.

With one step left on the championship itinerary, the U.S. is ahead in the battle for women's team honors with 305.60 points, followed by China with 303.75, Canada with 287.15 and Japan with 285.55.

In the chase for the combined men's and women's team trophy the U.S. is first with 763.30 points, followed by China with 749.55, Japan with 739.05, Canada with 731.30, Australia with 700.15, New Zealand with 690.40 and Mexico with 687.60.

In the over-all championship standings, Thomas was the top male competitor with 230.60 points, comfortably ahead of Kanai's 225.25.

It was a little closer in the over-all men's team standings, where the U.S. had 457.70 points, Japan 453.50, the People's Republic of China, competely internationally for the first time, 445.75 and Canada 439.80.

The TSE 300 index fell 64.26 to 1,676.08 as a wave of selling continued since interest rates were raised this week in Canada and the United States. All of the composite index's 14 units showed sharp declines.

Among the four most heavily-weighted groups, oil and gas dropped 154.03 to 3,265.72, metals and minerals 67.01 to 1,515.19, industrial products 38.81 to 1,209.11 and financial services 36.81 to 1,150.26.

Among the other 10 groups, real estate and construction issues showed the heaviest losses dropping 303.59 to 4,151.57.

New York

The stock market fell sharply in an avalanche of trading today as investors felt the impact of Federal Reserve Board moves that drove up interest rates and worried about the possibility of a deep recession.

Analysts said much of the drop was due to selling by traders who bought their shares on borrowed money and who are growing reluctant to pay interest rates well-above 15 per cent.

The market's sharp declines this week do not come close to matching the crash of October of 1929, when stock prices lost nearly 50 per cent of their value in a few weeks time. Since Monday, by contrast, the loss amounts to a loss of between seven and eight per cent.

London

The stock market was lower near the close of moderate trading today.

The Financial Times index was down 9.5 at 473.4 about an hour before the close.

Canadian issues were as much as $1 lower following sharp losses on Wall Street.
